

FINLAND AND ITS INHABITANTS.

The shores of Finland are now the theatre of Admiral Napier's operations. It is probable that the fate of the war will be decided here...

Finland is bounded on one side by a gulf of the same name, and on the other by the gulf of Bothnia. It is a vast region, extending from the 55th to the 65th degree of north latitude...

The interior is interspersed with lakes, swamps, and large forests which furnish excellent wood for naval purposes, and enormous blocks of granite...

Fishing, hunting, tending flocks, and the fur trade, all contribute to support the inhabitants. The coasts present good harbours for merchant vessels...

The population of Finland is not known exactly. Some travellers allow one million five hundred thousand inhabitants; others only one million...

The origin of the Finlanders or Fins is not known, and has furnished a subject of long discussion to the erudite. They are called in their own language Suomese, and their country is called Suomenmaa...

Since the time of Tacitus, the Fins have builded houses, and are partly civilized. They are of a medium height, their hair is white, their physiognomy grave, and even somewhat morose...

The inhabitants of Finland long belonged to Sweden. But the Russians from the time of Peter I. invaded one province after another, and the whole country was annexed to Russia by the treaty of 1809...

Among the bits of gossip now floating in Paris is one relating to a rich American, who wrote to Mlle. de S... of the opera, a tender epistle on the back of a banknote...

A contemporary says he does not know whether music is the food of love, but hearing it always creates in him the love of food.

WHAT MAKES A TEMPERANCE MAN.

In the early stage of the temperance reform, the Boston Telegraph, some thirty or forty years ago, said the man who scrupulously abstains from the use of ardent spirits is usually reputed, and might, as things were, justly enough call himself a temperance man...

The next step in advance was the pledge. It was not enough for a man to abstain; he must give in his adherence to the principle of total abstinence, openly before the world...

But it was soon found that all these means were quite inadequate to the great object in view. As long as grog shops stared the public in the face at every corner of our cities...

The idea of abolishing intemperance, or even of holding the ground already gained was evidently chimerical, unless these grog-shops could be shut up, and a cry was accordingly raised by the men of the temperance party...

At that time the ground on which the matter stands at present. No person has now a right to claim fellowship with the temperance party, or to speak in their name upon the more goodly personal abstinence, or of his good wishes for the general prevalence of temperance...

S. L. Tilly, Esq., says the Totalitar, the acting meet Weekly Patriot, of the Sons of Temperance, who formerly resided in St. John, but now in Fredericton the capital of New Brunswick...

The following Patriotic appeal we copy from the New Brunswick Chronicle, it may not be inappropriate to Prince Edward Island, at the present juncture...

as such, he should, after the mission of valor performed at Alma by British arms, step out of the ordinary course of nationality, and feeling that the British soldier's loyal heart and soul on the Altar of his country's cause, cheerfully yield to him to assuage the grief of the helpless widow...

As a stimulus to which we have the noble example of Canada, the Legislature of which have subscribed the munificent sum of $100,000, while the hearts of Britons of all classes have melted with benevolence...

CHARLOTTETOWN GAS LIGHT COMPANY.

We were as much surprised as either the Examiner or Advertiser could be at the immense rise—25 per cent—in the price of Gas, furnished by the above Company...

During the last three weeks, the Subordinate Division of the S. of T. have been several very interesting Meetings in their Hall...

THE MAILS.—No sign of the Colonial Mail at the time of our going to Press, (12 o'clock).

LIVER COMPLAINT.

The only remedy ever offered to the public that has never failed to cure, when directions are followed, is McLean's Liver Pill...

an advance as 25 per cent, was laid on. In the second place, there is truth in the assertion that the inhabitants were induced to go to a great expense in gas-stings on the implied if not express understanding, that the gas was not to exceed £1 per thousand feet, and it would be deemed to be but reasonable in an unexpected contingency like the present, that the loss should be equally shared...
