SEARCHING FOR MISER'S HOARD

Toronto, May 5—Felix Corr, the Queen street west recluse, who recently died, is supposed to have had $30,000, largely in bonds. He lived and worked in a shed. Fifteen minutes after he died Dr. Norman Allen and a lawyer arrived prepared to make the old man's will. He had wished to leave his money to Mr. Lockey, a grocer who lived two doors east. Today a mass of rubbish has been taken from the room in which he slept and searched. Everything has been examined, but no bonds have been found. A few days before his death he told Mrs. Lockey that his papers were at his hand; if so, where are they now?
