The Evening Chit-Chat

By RUTH CAMERON

"In quiet country places one may be poor, very poor, without much conscious suffering. But in a city, if one knows anything at all of the possibilities of civilized life, of the joys and comforts of good food, clothing and shelter, of theatre and concert and excursion, of entertaining and being entertained, poverty becomes a hell. In the country the innocent people wonder at the greediness of the more comfortable kinds of city folks, at their love of money, their incessant dwelling upon it, their reverence for those who have it, their picnic-like flight from those who have it not. Let them be careful how they judge. If you discover any human being anywhere acting as you think a human being should not, investigate all the circumstances, look thoroughly into all the causes of his or her conduct before you condemn him or her as inhuman, unworthy of your kinship and your sympathy."

—David Graham Phillips.
 The above passage from David Graham Phillips' new novel, "The Grain of Dust," I recommend to everyone who thinks himself a lover of fair play and the square deal to read over three times and then think about it. Especially the last sentence. I think that sentence would make an excellent working motto for any of us who are inclined to be critical of others to paste up on our desks, or better still, in our hearts. Only I'd like to add a little to it. "Investigate all the circumstances, look thoroughly into all the causes of his or her conduct before you condemn him or her"—and then make further allowances for a difference in inborn character and will power and strength of desires between you and the one you would judge, and acknowledge your entire inability to say "if I were what he is I would not have done that."

How one man dares judge another, bad or good, no matter what the circumstances are, I cannot understand, for surely accomplishment is not the only measure of goodness. Must not the tools each one has to start with and the obstacles he must encounter also be remembered in the reckoning?
 And who can judge these things for each one of us but our own souls? Or stay—can ever we ourselves judge ourselves? being as we are without any measure of other men's temptations and strength to judge our own by?
 For instance, how can the most highly respected member of the community dare to think that he is any better than the convict, ignorant as he is how his own desires compare with the convict's.
 The attempt to judge any human being seems to me like trying to solve X - Y - Z without having any idea what any of the letters stand for.
 Who shall say but when the Divine Knowledge that understands each one of us and holds the measure in his hands shall judge us. He shall say to the convict, "With the obstacles of circumstance and environment with which I handicapped you, with the enfeebled body and mind and will bequeathed from generations of until ancestors that I gave you, you struggled well"; and to the most highly respected member of the community, "Of splendid conditions of environment and opportunities, of the healthy body and brain and will power that I bestowed upon you, you have made but half what you should."

Who knows? Nobody.
 Isn't it wisest, then, "if you discover a human being anywhere acting as you think a human being should not, to investigate all the circumstances, look thoroughly into all the causes of his conduct" before you condemn him, and then remembering that there are yet other factors in the equation you can not find out, to still fall to condemn?

Silence!

The instinct of modesty natural to every woman is often a great hindrance to the cure of women's diseases. shrink from the personal questions of the local physician which seem indelicate. The thought of examination is abhorrent to them, and so they endure in silence a condition of disease which surely progresses from bad to worse.

It has been Dr. Pierce's privilege to cure a great many women who have found a refuge for modesty in his offer of FREE consultation by letter. All correspondence is held as sacredly confidential. Address Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y.

Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription restores and regulates the womanly functions, abolishes pain and builds up and puts the finishing touch of health on every weak woman who gives it a fair trial.

Household Notes.

Black goods that have grown grayish can often be freshened by wiping off with alcohol. This is particularly good for black hats and does not hurt crepe if properly applied.

If it is difficult to rid a frying pan of the smell of fish or onions a little oatmeal should be sprinkled over it and the pan shaken over the fire until the oatmeal begins to scorch.

For mending table linen save those long even threads which have been drawn from linen. In hemstitching Wind them on an empty spool and put aside until a tablecloth needs mending.

Most housekeepers know the difficulty of making cream of tomato soup. To lessen danger of curdling add a pinch of soda to the scalding milk and pour slowly into the hot strained tomatoes.

Columbus, Ohio, May 4.—The Legislative bribery scandal is growing in proportions every day. Detective W. J. Burns declares that "nearly fifty members of the Legislature have been caught in the net."

"The real big story is yet to come," he said to-day. "Marked money was used in paying the bribes solicited. Of all the bribery investigations with which I have been connected, the evidence in this is the most conclusive, most unquestionable, and was obtained by the most up-to-date methods."
 "I will say for the grafters in Columbia that of all grafters it has ever been my lot to know anything about, they are the most persistent I ever saw in my life."

Nervous? Let your doctor prescribe the medicine. He knows best. The fact, however, that Ayer's Sarsaparilla has such strong tonic properties, and is entirely free from alcohol, may make it precisely to his liking.

Lecture at Millertown.

Rev. John M. Allan, of Bay of Islands, gave a most interesting lecture at Millertown recently on the Russian-Japanese War. The new Town Hall was filled with a very appreciative audience, who enjoyed Mr. Allan's clear and graphic description of the great struggle. Mr. Allan is a lecturer of much merit and experience, and he dealt with the subject of his address in a most excellent manner. In the course of a brief prelude he mentioned the main causes which led to the commencement of hostilities between the two countries. Passing on to the later days of the war he gave to the audience an exceedingly simple but comprehensive survey of the main plan of campaign adopted by the Japanese. It was of course obvious to all that in the course of a single lecture it was quite impossible to deal extensively with any one aspect of the struggle. Mr. Allan therefore had arranged to deal mainly with some of the spectacular disasters of the fight, and this he did with unusual brilliancy of language and dramatic description. He described in a very vivid fashion the attempt of the Japanese to capture Port Arthur, and as he sketched a word picture of the sinking of the transport ships at the entrance to the harbor, it was easy to see that he had the rapt attention of the audience. The finest passage of his lecture was without doubt that in which he dealt with the blowing up of the Russian flagship. In a few sentences he portrayed the scene and showed how that ship, one of the finest in the Russian navy, met with a disastrous end through the explosion of a submarine mine. He spoke in an eloquent manner of the suddenness of the explosion. At one moment all was calm, peaceful and apparently safe. And yet in a second that scene of majestic peacefulness was changed into one of the most terrible sights of modern history. A terrific explosion rent the air, and the sea, until then almost untroubled, was lashed into a fury by the plunging of wreckage into its depths. Havoc was supreme, and the decks of the vessel presented a scene of carnage horrible to witness. For a moment the flagship rested upon the bosom of the water, and then with one last upheaval she was engulfed by the angry sea. On every side could be seen floating wreckage, struggling, shrieking figures—all that remained of the noble ship which but a few moments before had been the pride of every loyal Russian. The lecture was closed with a touching allusion to the death of Admiral Makaroff, who met an untimely end for the unfortunate flagship. With inexpressible pathos he described the scene at the memorial service held in St. Petersburg in honor of the heroic commander, and as we heard of the profound sorrow of the Russian nation at the death of its hero, instinctively we sorrowed with them.

The whole lecture was most admirable, and was not merely interesting, but thoroughly instructive, and has endeared Mr. Allan more than ever to the hearts of Millertown people. At an interval, Mr. H. M. Herbert, always a popular figure on the concert platform, sang in first class style the popular song "The Old Umbrella." Mr. Alexander Wood occupied the chair, and at the close of the lecture the Rev. Horace A. Morgan in an appropriate speech moved a hearty vote of thanks to Mr. Allan. Mr. C. F. Davis seconded, and the audience enthusiastically endorsed it by a long round of applause. Rev. Mr. Allan is a great favorite with the people of Millertown, which place he has visited for many years.—Com.

Fear Men are Drowned
 Mr. H. W. LeMessurier, Assistant Collector of Customs, had a wire yesterday afternoon from the Sub-Collector at Gambo saying that three men—Samuel Barron, Job C. Pritchett and Noah King—left Middle Brook Monday for Hare Bay, but that their boat had been picked up Tuesday, and it is feared the three have been drowned. Search parties sent out could get no trace of them. The men we learn are married and leave wives and families.
