Ex M.P. as Spy.

"Revelations" in New York—Schemes That Failed.

The New York World has begun the publication of the "Revelations of I. T. T. Lincoln, former member of Parliament who became a German spy."

The writer, Ignatius Timothy Trich Lincoln, was Liberal member for Darlington from January, 1910, to December of that year, and has in his time played many parts, having been born a Hungarian Jew and later figured as a Presbyterian missionary and an Anglican priest. His story must be rather painful reading in Darlington, and suggests the case with which a plausible impostor can impose upon an unsuspecting constituency.

According to Lincoln's statement to the New York newspaper, he determined to "get even" with his adopted country because of its "persecution" of aliens after the outbreak of war. The method of "getting even" is thus described:—"The plan I mapped out was nothing less than the decision to find out important military and naval secrets and to betray them to the Central Powers, and having achieved that to quit England for ever—if still alive."

Lincoln says that he first of all secured a post as a censor of Hungarian correspondence, but finding, he assures his American readers, that "appeals of Hungary for Red Cross aid from the United States were intercepted and destroyed" he resigned, then he tried to become a Secret Service agent, and laid before an official of the War Office a scheme which if it had succeeded would have "lured" part of the British fleet into the North Sea, there to be destroyed by the German fleet awaiting it. But the official was not to be tricked. In Lincoln's own words, "I was balked." Lincoln then went to Rotterdam and declares that he succeeded in obtaining possession of two German codes which he communicated to Captain Kenny, in return for which he hoped to get information of value to Germany. No such information was given him. At last, having good reason to fear that his motives were suspected, he flew to America, where he is in process of unobscuring himself.

In Reynold's Newspaper, Sir Henry Dalziel, M.P., gives an account of efforts made by Lincoln to secure his influence with the British authorities. Sir Henry listened to his story and had a conversation with Mr. Macpherson, M.P., who was at the War Office, on the subject, but the authorities showed no disposition to accede to Lincoln's importunity and grant him certain facilities he desired. Sir Henry formed the opinion that Lincoln was hard pressed for money, an

Splitting Pains in the Muscles Driven Out Quickly by "Nerviline."

Rheumatic Pains Go—Suffering Ceases—Cure Comes in Even Chronic Cases.

For aching bones and sore muscles nothing will soothe away the pain like Nerviline.

For nerve-wracking twinges in the muscles, for torturing backache or lumbago, you'll find Nerviline is full of amazing power.

You see, Nerviline has the power—it's about five times stronger than ordinary remedies, and can penetrate very deeply. It contains juices and extracts of certain herbs that give it a strange power to drive out congestion, inflammation or pain.

You are safe in using Nerviline. Just rub it on—it won't blister or burn, and can do nothing but good.

opinion borne out by the following letter he received:—

51 Torrington-square, W.C., January 29, 1915.

Dear Sir Henry Dalziel,—I have been called by telegram to the Admiralty. I saw the Director of the Intelligence Division. They won't give me anything, because they found out a certain thing in my recent past which, although it has nothing to do with my work, or with their service, or with the value of my work, influences them or rather prejudices them, against me.

This is cruel, mean, unjust, un-British! I pray and trust that you will give me an unfair advantage of me which is devilish.

Please, for the sake of righteousness do not allow this!

If they do not remunerate me, at any rate to some extent, I shall be exposed, with my wife and children, to great hardship and misery.

Is it right to use my information and then, after four weeks, to turn me down?

They ought to be ashamed of themselves. I pray and trust that you will not permit this to take place. Excuse me for having troubled you. Yours truly,

I. T. T. LINCOLN.

The Right Hon. Sir Henry Dalziel M.P., P.C.

The "incident" in his past is unknown to Sir Henry Dalziel, who sums up as follows:—

"My own belief is that in order to make money he did undertake the visit to Rotterdam, and succeeded in inveigling himself into the confidence of the German Secret Service. When he found that his services were not to be taken advantage of by the authorities here he recognized that his betrayal of the Germans made it impossible for him to go back to Germany or Austria without the risk of being shot. He departed, therefore, for the United States, almost the only place left for him to go with safety, to endeavour to pick up some dollars, and to win the favour of the Germans in that country. With this end in view he has published his so-called 'confessions'—which have, doubtless, brought him the much-needed money—his other idea being, if possible, to rehabilitate himself with the German authorities, although I should say there is very little chance of this happening, because it is obvious that they themselves have recognized by this time that they were very cleverly duped."

An Adventurer's Career.

Lincoln, as he has chosen to call himself, appears to have been born in Paks, Hungary, in 1879, and when he disappeared from his native land in 1896 he was "wanted" by the police. In 1897 he was discovered in White-chapel and helped by a missionary, whom he rewarded by stealing his wife's jewelry. In 1890 he studied theology in Germany, and in that year married in Hamburg. In the following year he turned up in Canada, and after some time spent in the Presbyterian College, Montreal, he was appointed a missionary. Later he joined the Anglican Church and was ordained. In 1903 he returned to England and became curate of Appledore, Kent.

Two years later he is heard of as teaching in a Quaker school in York, and in the following year appears to have imposed on Mr. Seebohm Rowntree and became his private secretary. In January 1910, he succeeded in defeating Mr. Pike Pease at the Darlington election, and he made his maiden speech in February, 1910. He withdrew from Parliament at the Dissolution in December. In 1911 he met his creditors, his liabilities being returned at £1,700. A composition of 5s. in the pound was arranged. The most notable recent events of his career have been described above.

Electoral Devices at Darlington.

Our Darlington Correspondent telegraphs:

In political circles here and particularly in those of the party which returned him to Parliament in 1910, the admission of the Hungarian who fought the constituency in vitriolic fashion have come as a bolt from the blue. It is dawning upon the Liberal voters that they were completely hoodwinked by Lincoln, who wormed himself into the confidence of the electorate in a manner which suited the clamor of party politics of the period. He left no stone unturned in order to bring about the defeat of Mr. Pike Pease. From his first appearance in Darlington to his last he carried his plans through with remarkable efficiency, and to achieve his object went so far as to take deputations of working men to Germany in order to convince them of the difference between a protected and a free trade country. His chief method was to pour forth masses of figures on the heads of the working classes, and he used to expound them by the aid of the blackboard and chalk.

At the dissolution of Parliament at the end of 1910 he retired owing to financial difficulties, and Mr. Pease regained the seat for the Unionist Party. Lincoln then dropped almost out of existence, so far as Darlington was concerned, many of his former supporters feeling keenly that a mistake had been made in adopting him as candidate.

No Girl Need Have a Blotched Face

Whether it be in capturing the heart of man, or making her way through the world by the toll of her hands, a charming and pretty face gives any girl a big advantage. Poor complexion and rough, sallow skin are caused by blood disorders. The cure is simple. Just use Dr. Hamilton's Pills—a reliable family remedy that has for years been the foremost blood remedy in America. Fads and Fashions.

With the very short skirt the waist line should not be very sharply defined.

In furs there is a suggestion that the one-skin scarf will be very fashionable.

The favorite sports hat of the moment is the soft felt in white or in light colors.

Little ap-ons of white net are made for the small tot to wear over her silk dress.

White duck coat blouses with white muslin sleeves are worn with white duck skirts.

Fashion wishes that all women should be short-skirted, wide-hemmed and wide-collared.

A soft trilling of lace inside the standing collar of a taffeta coat is a charming feature.

Parasols with blocks of color as wide as the space between the parasol ribs may be seen.

Some of the new skirts have deep circular bouffants set on at a point even with the knees.

Wide scarfs of black chiffon or satin edged with marabou are designed for evening scarfs.

All white vests or blouses to be worn with a taffeta bolero and skirt should be made separately.

Black taffeta frocks are often trimmed with beads—or at least have parts of their girdles beaded.

In the fall the tailored suit will be trimmed either with cordings, pipings, shirrings, or bias folds.

Some taffeta dresses have the skirts almost completely covered with tiny scalloped self-ruffles.

A feature of June ball dresses for young girls is floral garlands looped about the flounced skirt.
