

The Horseless Carriage.

(A weekly column devoted to the interest of the Motoring Public.)

The City Council have at last been in a position to publish the advertisement calling for Car taxes—only two and a half months before it is up to you, Mr. Motorist, to take up by to-day or explain to Judge Morris. The horse power method of rating met at a largely attended public meeting of motorists held in the early part of the season. Ford owners, of course, come out a little easier than others but then as "the world loves a lover" so all the world sympathizes with a "tin Lizzie" proprietor. Chevrolet owners are treated well. We are not quite sure of the special reason for this as there are several other cars of similar horse power. We which get no special treatment. We which get no special treatment. We which get no special treatment.

men who cause accidents are those who may be the most expert drivers, know all the traffic regulations and laws, and can handle a motor perfectly. But they take it into their heads that they are going to speed, they want to try out their new car, or their overhauled machine, and perhaps they may want to pass a speeder car which is ahead of them. There are a dozen reasons one might mention as to why a driver puts on speed—quite natural, but a great risk not only to themselves but to everybody else using the road, be he driver or pedestrian.

"The man who knows the law, and yet deliberately sets out to break it, may, and undoubtedly has, a license to drive, but he fails to remember that license carries with it an implied obligation that he must drive at all times with care and discretion, that he must be reasonable and not a danger to his fellow men."

"Then there is another class of people who cause accidents. And these are the children. Last year a careful analysis of the fatal accidents in the city (Montreal) in which motorists were involved, showed that fifty per cent. of them were to children, and of this number ninety per cent. of them were under ten years of age. No matter how careful a driver may be, even if his wheels are barely turning, there is always the danger of some child darting out from the sidewalk or from behind some other vehicle, or from some side street, without looking where he or she is going, and the driver of the automobile has no earthly chance of doing anything."

"What should be done is to have a campaign of education for the parents as to traffic conditions, tell them how to cross our busy thoroughfares, teach them "safety first" and then get them to teach their children. Impress on them the danger of playing in the streets, of looking first to see which way the traffic is moving before attempting to cross, of crossing only at street intersections and of waiting a few minutes, if necessary until the stream of traffic slackens—it is much better to wait a minute at a street crossing than to spend weeks in a hospital through an effort to hurry."

"Educate the motorist to drive at a reasonable speed, educate him to keep to the proper side of the road, to realize that other people have rights as well as he. Make examples of those road hogs who are a big nuisance to their fellow motorists as they are a menace to the public generally. Let the police look out for these kind of drivers and when they are caught in "flagrant delicto," let the judges deal with them severely and deprive them of the right to be dangerous."

"Educate the public to use the streets rationally, to cross busy thoroughfares at intersections. The policeman is there to hold up the traffic if necessary, so that they can cross in safety. Our traffic police are doing good work but they want the co-operation of the public, and if they can eliminate those who are under age, and are not considered competent to drive, our streets will be safer and many precious lives saved."

MR. DUNLOP.

By the way, what a splendid description of the Surgeons of some of our more popular doctors, the name of that car is "Scripps-Booth" do you get it? A booth where you are supplied with those useful letters of introduction to the Controller.

Julius Caesar—or one of those wise old guys—remarked once that "a live dog is better than a dead lion" but nothing doing now-a-days as far as anything like that goes. Did you ever have the misfortune to run over an all-rooster? You could have bought a live one for fifty cents but once you have sent it "West," it immediately develops into "the finest laying hen in the farmyard. Mister, and I'll call it square for a five dollar bill." And yet some people think it pays to be honest.

Somebody asks "where do the flies go in winter time?" What we want to know is "why do the cars stop at Seal Cove Bridge?"

We are cutting out the rest of the "car" this week to make room for extracts from a splendid article in the Montreal Standard of July 30th by the President of the Automobile Club of Canada headed "Safety First Motoring," for which we are indebted to Mr. Wm. White:

"Licenses have not all the bearing on the accident question. Think of the thousands of people who learn to drive a car every year—greenhorns, but you rarely hear of them being in an accident or killing somebody. The reason is because they are naturally careful. They don't know their machines; the extent of its power, the ability or otherwise of its control. They are afraid to drive recklessly, either because of a desire to save themselves from injury or because they do not want to run the risk of losing their newly acquired car. They may have some slight mishaps, but they are as a rule careful drivers from a self interest point of view. Who, then, are the people who cause accidents? The men and wo-

Bonavista Notes.

The three-masted sailing vessel Beacon has been harbored here during the past few days, loading coal for P. Templeman.

A few days since a cargo of coal arrived to the firm of P. Templeman, and was immediately disposed of to their respective customers. This is the first cargo for the season. We understand that Messrs. J. T. Swaine and J. Ryan intend having bargoes at a later date. The price has not yet been definitely fixed, but seems to have dropped considerably, especially "easier" price than last year as anticipated by the general public.

As far as the fishery here has been a very poor one. Little trapping has been done, save what a few of our more habitually fortunate fishers succeeded in securing during a day or two's "spurt." We refer to a couple of days when good hauls were made in a few traps but their good fortune was of short duration, and the majority of trappers have very little to show for their summer's labor. The hook and line men have not been doing anything worth while, though small catches are being taken at night bait the past few days.

Hon. W. F. Coaker motored over from Port Union one afternoon last week, and returned the same evening.

Our friend Mr. J. H. Scammell, the venerable member for St. Barbe, returned from Catalina on Saturday afternoon by train next day. How are you going to wet your whistle?

Mr. M. H. Parsons, representing the Nid. Boot & Shoe Mfg. Co., Ltd., arrived by Saturday night's train on a business visit.

Rumor has it that work on the canal will resume in a few days' time. Whether there is any truth in the assertion or not we are not prepared to vouch. We understand quite a number of those who worked thereon just previous to its closing down, are still awaiting payment for their work, and some dissatisfaction is felt because the matter has been allowed to remain in "sling" for such an extended period. Seeing the "highness" of the times, those in authority would confer a genuine favor on the workmen by coming across with the necessary funds.

Mr. R. and Miss D. Sellers are spending a vacation at the home of their uncle Dr. C. A. Forbes.

Mr. J. J. Young, manager of the Bank of Nova Scotia, who had been on a brief holiday at Chang's Islands, returned last week accompanied by his wife and Mrs. J. Roberts. During his absence Mr. C. Gardner, manager at one of the northern branches fulfilled the duties of relieving manager.

The wedding of Mr. Gilbert Noffel, Superior of the Methodist Central School, to Miss Ethel Brown assistant teacher, took place at the Methodist Parsonage on the 12th inst. The happy couple left by Saturday's train to spend the honeymoon. We wish Mr. and Mrs. Noffel many years of wedded bliss.

The annual Church of England Sunday School picnic is scheduled to take place to-morrow and the youngsters are anticipating an enjoyable time, should they be favored with fine weather.

Household Notes.

When you buy a roast get it large enough so that you will have some left over to slice for sandwiches. It is excellent in toasted sandwiches.

When making huckleberry pie, sprinkle a pinch of salt and a few grains of pepper on the fruit. This takes away all that insipid flavor.

A vacuum bottle is indispensable in the sick-room. Water, milk, whites of eggs, etc., can be kept in perfect condition within reach of the invalid.

Mix dried fruit with a generous amount of sweetened and flavored whipped cream. Sprinkle with chopped nut meats and serve on lettuce.
