Lithopone: Product of Infant Industry.

Lithopone is an artificially prepared compound composed of 70 per cent zinc sulphide, precipitated together. It is a recognized standard pigment and filler used by paint and rubber manufacturers and today the normal amount manufactured in the United States is above 130,000 tons, which at the price of 7 cents a pound represents a total of $18,900,000, which is pretty good for an "infant" industry only a few years old. About 80 per cent of the lithopone is manufactured in Pennsylvania, New Jersey, Delaware and Maryland, and the remaining 20 per cent, in the states of Illinois, Missouri and California.

ROAD IMPROVEMENT.

Dear Sir.—It is very pleasing to note that the Torbay Road, the most popular country road in the East End, is now being put in first-class condition. The grading is remarkably good and the men employed on the job deserve a meed of praise, as their work would compare favourably with that of experts. Coaker's Hill has been widened and the old bridge at the foot of the hill replaced with one of concrete. The same should be done with Parson's Bridge, a little further on. A "blind corner" here should also be attended to, as two accidents have occurred there already. I am not an alarmist, but I believe in "safety first." Widening this bridge and removing the trees that obstruct the view of the road, these improvements will be much appreciated by the people of the outlying settlements, and those who go out to enjoy the beautiful scenery along the open country enroute to the picturesque village of Torbay. While on this subject I would like to suggest that the short road leading from the Torbay Road to the Cove Road, near Stott's Bridge, be extended from the Logy Bay Road, near the Golf Links, to the old Cove Road. This would be an advantage to motorists and others and would cut out the roundabout way of the King's Bridge for those whose business call them to the upper part of the city. I am not afflicted with cacophonous scribbling, but realizing the benefit the extension of this road would be to the public induced me to refer to it here to bring it under the notice of those interested in road making.

Stone-Eaters.

Stones are commonly found in the stomachs of the crab-eating seal of the Antarctic seas; and it is believed that they, with a certain amount of grit, are scooped up with the crustacea from the bottom of the sea. The emperor penguin, on the other hand, shows an instinctive craving for stones for gizzard-grinding purposes; for these stones must be assiduously sought, since these birds never rest upon dry land, but only upon ice. The fate of stones swallowed by birds is not easy to determine.

Another unexpected name in this list of stone-swallowers is that of the Lesser Borqual. This is a "baleen" whale, feeding upon minute crustacea, and fish. From the peculiar method of feeding, which is, so to speak, forced upon this animal, it is unlikely that any portion of the food is scooped up from the sea-floor; hence the pebbles found in its stomach must be deliberately swallowed, and it is supposed, for the purpose of digestion, or rather, of trituration. They are hardly likely to be derived from the fish which are engulfed, for these are mostly herring. — San Francisco Chronicle.
