DRAKE WILL RUN ON WET PLATFORM

Former Alderman Will Seek a Seat in City Council at Next Election.

One month from today is nomination day for London's municipal contests. Only a couple of sessions for the 1925 council and other elected bodies remain. Yet the municipal political field is still barren of new potentialities in the way of candidates. There is one man offering himself again for mayoralty honors, another former alderman has definitely thrown his hat into the ring. and another is definitely getting out Others are afflicted with indecision although two slates are in the process of formation. "I'm going to bet a wet candidate or alderman," declared ex-Ald. G.

B. Drake this afternoon. "I'm not making any bones about it. That's where I stand, and I want everybody to know it."

And the wet candidate, erstwhile dean of councils for some years, is the only man to say definitely that he is in the field. Of course the he is in the field. Of course the mayor himself gives his friends the Impression that he will again try for the chief magistracy. Ald. Harry Bottrill today declared that he would t be a candidate.

Members of the present council are not ready to express themselves on the likelihood of their canditure. although they appear to be around to the point where the cam-paign will find most of them in the contest. The formation of slates is

"Hunting big game is the best re ducer exercise for woman I know," she said. "I have lost 50 pounds." Only natives accompanied Mrs. Akeley, and she was the only member of her party who was armed with a rifle. Altogether she killed 30 large animals, but the pelts of all except the ones she showed today were lost In one of her thrilling adventures.
A giant lizard dropped into her canoe one day from an overhanging branch and the canoe was overturned in the excitement of the native padllers and all the skins in the craft

Mrs. Akeley said that at first the natives had little faith in the re-liability of a woman hunter and were hability of a woman numer and were hesitant about following her into the jungle. One day, however, she shot a giant python in two, and after that the natives felt perfectly safe with her as their protectress.
