Some particulars have been received in Toronto of how Flight Sub Lieutenant H. Laurence Crowe, met his death at Plymouth, England, on the 22nd of June. He had been on active duty with the Royal Naval Air Service for about three months, and or that day, well supplied with bombs and in response to an order from the Admiralty, went on patrol duty to watch for a submarine which had been discovered lying on the bottom, some discovered lying on the bottom and that Mr. Messenger be dismissed on Monday, the 23rd instant, at noon, and that Mr. Messenger be dismissed on Monday, the 23rd instant, at noon, and that Mr. Messenger be dismissed on Monday, the 23rd instant, at noon, and that Mr. Messenger be dismissed on Monday, the 23rd instant, at noon, and that Mr. Messenger be dismissed on Monday, the 23rd instant, at noon, and that Mr. Messenger be dismissed on Monday, the 23rd instant, at noon, and that Mr. Messenger be dismissed on Monday, the 23rd instant, at noon, and that Mr. Messenger be dismissed on Monday, the 23rd instant, at noon, and that Mr. Messenger be dismissed on Monday, the 23rd instant, at noon, and that Mr. Messenger be dismissed on Monday, the 23rd instant, at noon, and that Mr. Messenger be dismissed on Monday, the 23rd instant, at noon, and that Mr. Messenger be dismissed on Monday, the 23rd instant, at noon, and that Mr. Messenger be dismissed on Monday, the 23rd instant, at noon, and that Mr. Messenger be dismissed on Monday, the 23rd instant, at noon, and that Mr. Messenger be dismissed on Monday, the 23rd instant, at noon, and that Mr. Messenger be dismissed on Monday, the 23rd instant, at noon, and that Mr. Messenger be di He had been on active watch for a submarine which had been discovered lying on the bottom, some miles from shore. At the end of ar hour Lieutenant Crowe started back to the 'Drome.' When about 500 yards from the shore, at a height of 1500 feet, something happened to the machine, which suddenly nose dived into In four seconds the waves ed over the machine and its galclosed over the machine and its gai-lant pilot, leaving nothing but a little oil on the service to the mark the spot The body was recovered by mine sweepers and at the inquest surgeons stated death was instantaneous and Naval honors were accorded Lieut Naval nonors were accorded Electrons to the body from the hospital to depot. His father, Harry J. Crowe, of Toronto, and Lieutenant Henry S. Crowe, of Halifax, were in attendance. A touching tribute to the memory of this brave lad was a small aeroplane constructed by the mechanics. It was about sever feet long, covered with moss and flow ers and bore an inscription with the names of his fellow officers and mer who paid the highest tribute of respect to the courage and devotion of this gallant young Canadian. Lieut-enant Crowe was a particularly keen flyer and always ready to take the pa-trol of any fellow officer who might not be feeling very fit. In no other service is there greater demand for chivalry, brilliant daring, skill and courage than in the Royal Flying-Corps and the Royal Naval Air Service and into them, as well as into all other branches of active service go the best and the bravest of our lads. Lieutenant Crowe assured his parents that he ant crowe assured his parents that he was convinced there was "no great er cause for which a man could give his life." All honor to him and to the other lads who make the supreme sacrifice that justice may be done. Lieut Crowe was a graduate of St. Andrew's onto, and had completed College, Toronto, and nad completed one year in Toronto University. The future was full of promise but he counted not his life dear unto himself, and his sacrifice has not been in vain, for we know he has helped to "lay the unseen foundations of a fairer and better world."

better world."

Mr. Crowe arrived in Montreal with his son's body July 29th and the interment, under the direction of the military authorities took place at Mount Pleasant Cemetery, Toronto.
