by the great Kellar, is at the Grand this week, and his opening performance last night was attended by a large audience. His performance is amusing, mystifying and entertaining, and his work is neat and clever. There is a number of new and original novelties in the mystic art and all are presented with ingenious skill and dexterity. This array of larger illusions are so well conceived and executed as to seem truly inexplicable by any natural law, and follow one after another—each being distinct and separate from the other—until two hours of mystery and entertainment have glided by unknowingly.
