Political Situation in West

A Winnipeg special despatch to The Toronto Star says:

Judging by reports appearing in the western press the last few days, there will not be unanimity at next week's great convention of Liberals. The Norris government and the Martin government leaders are more closely allied in their aims than any other element that will be present, but the rank and file show a desire to "kick over" any defined line of policy of action. Norris is for win-the-war first and repudiation of Laurier. In this he is backed up by his members and by Hon. James M. Calder and by The Free Press.

Premier Martin is not so warm on this policy, being new to the premiership and having close personal friendship for years with Laurier when he sat in the commons. The mass of the grain-growers are against conscription of man-power. They are looking for a leader, and will no doubt find him amongst the men of their powerful organization. They are against British Columbia Liberals being placed on the same footing at the convention with the prairie delegates. That province is keen for high duties on lumber and fruit. There is not so much affinity of interests with grain growers. Then there are a large number of Liberals who desire to see the Borden Government defeated before any new win-the-war plan is tried out. Oliver will be their leader.

Hon. Charles Cross, attorney-general of Alberta, is heart and soul with Norris and Calder. He is a personal opponent of Oliver, and his presence with Oliver at the convention will introduce lively titles. Oliver is backed up by R. L. Richardson with his paper, The Tribune, which has wide influence with the grain growers.

Sir Clifford a Puzzle. What part Sir Clifford Sifton intends to play is a puzzle to the rank and file. He arrived early on the scene, and while he took no part at the conferences held to arrange for the convention, attended by premiers and cabinet members of three prairie provinces, yet he saw them all individually, and no doubt pressed his views home. He left the impression on those he conferred with that he desired to take a large part in the coming convention, was thoroly in sympathy with the idea of the convention, and wished to have something to say on who shall be leader. Sir Clifford was not received with cordiality by these provincial leaders, and, after addressing the Canadian Club here yesterday, he left last night to address meetings at Moose Jaw and Regina, which will be largely political in character. How much of a following Sir Clifford will command is problematical. At the present outlook it will be small, although some of the delegates already named are his personal friends and old political associates.

An Amazing Puzzle.

A Winnipeg special despatch to The Toronto Telegram says: It is an amazing political puzzle that is developing over the approaching convention of western Liberals. So many angles and so much intrigue are being disclosed that any attempt to analyze motives and possible combinations is useless. Unquestionably, Sir Clifford Sifton has created a ripple, and his rooms at the Fort Garry Hotel resemble a central political machine in a well-oiled working condition. Prominent Liberals from all parts of the west have been entertained there day and night for a week, and some prominent Conservatives. Local factions have sent their representatives, and the query is heard on every side: "What is Sifton driving at?"

Resentment Shown. It has been stated that there is some resentment over the presence of Sifton. A new angle of this phase developed when Hon. A. R. Hudson gave out his interview yesterday to both The Tribune and Free Press, asserting that "this is to be a western convention, and western men and women are quite capable of doing their own thinking and their own acting. We will welcome eastern press representatives, but they are the only easterners we expect or want to see at any stage." Political circles are buzzing over the suggestion that the statement is a calculated rebuff to Sir Clifford, and perhaps it is, for Hudson is a pretty big figure, and he and Norris, the Manitoba premier, would be dominating factors in the convention with Sifton out of the way. Norris is holding forth in a suite of rooms at the Royal Alexandra Hotel, and there is a constant stream of visitors and messengers between the two hotels.

Keystone of Convention.

Another Winnipeg special despatch to The Toronto Telegram says: There is a disposition here to regard Premier Norris' Winnipeg deliverance yesterday as the keystone of the coming Liberal convention. The Manitoba leader repudiates Sir Wilfrid Laurier, but simultaneously attacks the Borden government, and declares for a national administration, with conscription as a vital plank. It is believed that this, along with bold declarations for tariff revision, will be the central idea of next week's gathering in Winnipeg.

Martin's Statement.

A Regina special despatch to The Toronto News says: Premier Martin's general attitude on the Liberal political situation was set forth at a meeting of the Regina Liberals last night, held to nominate delegates to the Winnipeg convention. He defended on general grounds, the refusal to grant an extension of the life of parliament, and declared he would rather see Quebec under Laurier than under Laverge. "Looking back over the situation today, Premier Martin questions whether it was the right policy, judging by the events of the past year, to allow the extension. "There is cry for a national government. It is well to remember that there is no question at all in the minds of the people of Canada that the Dominion Government's method of recruiting has resulted in bungling. I have ever since the war began favored a national government, but the Conservative party, up to a short time ago, never offered to ally Liberal in Canada a position in a national government. Why was not a national government asked for two years ago? The management of the war so far as Canada is concerned would have been on a better basis if we had had national government two years ago. "Since the war started there has been favoritism from one end of the militia to the other. No one in this country questions for a moment the fact that the military organization so far as the province is concerned, has been nothing more or less than a political machine. Profiteering has been allowed to run rampant in Canada. The stand the Liberal party has always taken, and she still takes, is that we are in the war to the very end. I would rather see Quebec in the hands of Sir Wilfrid Laurier than in the hands of Bourassa or Laverge. In the west, our proper course, as I see it, is to favor the mobilization of money, men and materials for the purpose of winning this war. That is my own personal view. If a pro- port effort were put forward by a national government in the way of recruiting we would get the men without the necessity of enforcing conscription. "At the convention next week many important problems will come up. There will be many questions of a distinctly western kind to be discussed, and it may be that we may have a distinctly western policy and group of men selected at the next election."

WORK IS FALLING OFF IN MUNITION PLANTS

According to the vice-president of a large munition manufacturing concern in Toronto practically all its female employees have been discharged owing to the necessity for curtailment of production, and for the time being the plant will only be operated five days a week with all the work being done by men. He declared, however, that the step had not been deemed necessary on account of the distressing effects of the heat, neither had the question of the length of hours anything to do with it. In correcting the impression that munition manufacturers could work their employees more than ten hours a day, Dr. Riddell of the Ontario Government Trades and Labor Department said: "Sixty hours a week is the legal week. Ten hours a day is the most they can work them. It is true that a permit may be granted for 12 days only in a year for munition firms to work their employees at most 12 1/2 hours. We have closed up some munition plants that have been making their employees work 12 hours a day and there have been some prosecutions. I think that ten hours a day is too long for the women to work in these plants and would gladly see the hours much shorter."

WOMEN ARE HARVESTING.

Special to The Toronto World. Kingston, July 31.—Bumper crops are being harvested in this district. In order to overcome the labor question, practically all the women are out in the fields and they are doing their work cheerfully.

You were Inquiring?

Theodocia. — May every wish be granted and every dream come true! If only it were possible for me to become your fairy godmother for a time, you could be certain of success! However, of one thing you may be assured, and that is that someone especially interested will be in your audience when an opportunity comes for Toronto to hear you. To get down to business—as you will be doing soon—you will be glad to know that the cards you wish may be obtained here. For engraving plates the cost is estimated per line, and in different kinds of lettering the prices are as follows:—Plain script, 50c; plain Old English, $1.25; shaded Old English, $1.50; Spanish lettering, $1.25; or shaded $1.50; block lettering, $1.25. A charge of $1.10 per hundred is the rate for cards made from these plates. Printed cards cost about 75c per hundred. When you decide what you wish, it would be advisable for you to have your order filled through the Shopping Service. Books which you might find helpful would be the Canadian Almanac, price $1.00, or the Canadian Woman's Annual and Social Service Directory, special at 15c.

Chic. — Whether those snow-white hairs may not yet be a crowning glory is a question. However, at seventeen they are rather a trial, aren't they? I hesitate very much to recommend any hair restorer, for the difficulty is that if one begins the use of such a preparation it is then always necessary, and as time passes the constant use would be irksome, do you not think so? However, Morden's Hair Restorer has a very large sale, which would seem to prove that many people find it satisfactory. It is a patent preparation, so the contents are unknown, except to the manufacturers. Price, 78c per bottle.

Isabel. — A collar almost exactly like the one on the figure in the illustration you enclosed may be bought for $3.00; it has the high shirred band around the neck and the very full jabot falling in two points down the front; it is of cream embroidered net. A cascade effect at each side and lace edging and French embroidery characterize a similar collar at $2.50. Applique lace distinguishes another at $2.00, and at $1.50 is a pretty collar hemstitched and having a guipure medallion in each corner of the doubly pointed jabot. Any of these should be charming as a finish for your mother's mauve muslin dress.
