MEMBERS' NIGHT AT MAIN STREET BAPTIST CHURCH

The members of the church and congregation of the Main Street Baptist church gathered there last evening for the annual "members' night."

After the opening exercises, Hon. Dr. W. F. Roberts reviewed the history of the church, going back to the time of its organization in 1842.

Following the address, Miss Ethel Perce sang a solo very acceptably.

The chairman then outlined the present needs of the church in connection with the Sunday school and young people's work.

and he asked for contributions towards raising the balance due. A splendid response from the members followed and a substantial amount was added to the fund.

The pastor then spoke concerning the church's future and declared that it was strictly up to the members as to whether the church would advance or go backward.

Following this address the roll call was taken and more than 300 members responded.

Dr. and Mrs. A. D. Smith, 209 Charlotte street, yesterday received many congratulations from the friends on the occasion of their fifty-second wedding anniversary.

Ltd., Miss Marie Brodshaw and M. V. Stolce, insurance; Kings County Garage and The National Garage, automobiles; Charles Carr, pianos and other musical instruments; United Farmers' store booth which is particularly attractive with its display of fruits and vegetables.

James De Mille, (Ottawa Journal).

The recent action of Dalhousie College in creating a James De Mille scholarship is a reminder to the rest of Canada that we might do a good deal more than we have done to perpetuate the memory of our noteworthy men of letters.

James De Mille was a native of St. John (N. B.), educated at Acadia College, Wolfville, and Brown University, Providence (R. I.).

After a brief excursion into the field of journalism, he joined the faculty of Acadia, afterwards accepting the chair of English literature at Dalhousie University, which he held up to the time of his death.

It was while lecturing at the latter college that he brought out, as the result of years of work, his "Elements of Rhetoric," an admirably written text-book, whose wealth of illustrative quotations is a tribute to his scholarship and extraordinarily wide reading.

Unfortunately for De Mille, an eminent Harvard professor published a work on the same subject as his own book was going through the press, with the result that the Canadian work never received the recognition to which it was entitled.

But it is rather on a novelist than as a scholar that De Mille will be remembered. As one of the results of an extended visit to Europe, during which he spent several months in Rome, he published his first romance, the "Martyr of the Catacombs" (1883), followed two years later by "Helen's Household," and in 1889 by "The Dodge Club."

The first two deals with ancient Rome in the first century. The latter is a delightfully amusing bit of fiction in the manner of Mark Twain's "Innocents Abroad," published the same year, but after De Mille's book, it is highly improbable that Mr. Clemens got his idea from Professor De Mille, but certainly the Canadian writer could not have plagiarized the work of the American humorist. It was probably one of those literary coincidences with which we are all familiar. "The Dodge Club" was published by Harper, and De Mille brought out through the same firm, in rapid succession, "Cord and Creec," "The Cryptogram," "The Lady of the Ice," "A Comedy of Terrors," "The American Baron," "An Open Question" and "The Living Link."

At the same time, through a Boston publisher, he was producing a series of remarkably readable boys' books, "The B. O. W. C." (Boys of Wolfville College), "Lost in the Fog," "Boys of Grand Pre School," "The Seven Hills," "Picked Up Adrift," "Treasure of the Seas," and several others. It is sufficient to say of these boys' books that they are still popular in the children's departments of scores of public libraries, particularly in New England.

After De Mille's death, Harper published his "Strange Manuscript Found in a Copper Cylinder," an extremely clever satire on our modern worship of wealth, thrown into the form of an engrossing romance. This book has sometimes been spoken of as an imitation of Rider Haggard, but it was actually written long before any of Rider Haggard's stories were published, and in any event is a much more powerful piece of work. Professor MacMechan, of Dalhousie, found among de Mille's

WOMEN PAY FOR LOW NECKS IN HIGHER INSURANCE RATES

Geneva, Oct. 4.—Low necks, short sleeves, short skirts and high heels in feminine apparel have increased women as an insurance risk.

Several Swiss insurance companies which insure against sickness have announced that their premiums are now raised 15 per cent. for women because of their curtailed garb.

JOHN D. ROCKEFELLER GIVES MEDICAL SCHOOL TO LONDON

London, Sept. 18.—(A. P. by Mail)—Through the generosity of John D. Rockefeller, London is soon to have one of the finest medical schools in the world.

Work has already begun on the first part of the building programme, on which more than $1,000,000 is to be spent. This includes provision for a new nurses' house for the University College Hospital, an obstetric building of six stories, and an enlargement of the medical school.

Houses in University street and Huntley street are shortly to be pulled down in order to make room for this large scheme. Later an open ward for septic cases and further research laboratories are to be built. The project will reach completion some time in 1923.

HAVANA TO NAME STREET IN HONOR OF BRAZIL

Havana, Cuba, Sept. 19.—(A. P. by Mail)—To compensate somewhat for Cuba's failure to send a special diplomatic mission to the Brazilian Centennial and erect an exhibit at Rio de Janeiro, the city council has approved a motion to change the name of Tenente Rey street to Brazil. The change will be made with appropriate ceremonies as the mayor approves the ordinance.
