Sir Richard Sutton, Just of Age, Owns Much of Rich- est Part of London - Strange Tale of Photo- graph

How intricately the affairs of the old world are mingled with those of the new is strikingly shown when it is seen that it is impossible to refer to any event on the other side without coming in with something American. Take, for instance, the coming of age of Sir Richard Sutton, on Friday last.

It serves as a reminder that he is the son of the late Sir Richard Sutton, who was the owner of the famous racing yacht Genesta, which he sailed against the Puritan for the America's Cup, in 1886. He died suddenly, and somewhat mysteriously on the Genesta, on February 25, 1891.

His son, Richard, the present baronet, was born two months afterwards. Young Richard's mother was Constance Edith, daughter of Sir Richard Vincent Corbett, and who after four years of widowhood married Rev. Herbert Delaval Astley, by whom she had a son, Philip Astley, who accompanied her on a visit to the United States about four years ago.

Young Sir Richard's grandfather and namesake, the fourth baronet, was as famous on the turf as his son was in yachting circles.

The baronetcy is a very rich one, the estate including some of the most valuable real estate in the west end of London. An idea of its magnitude can be gathered by anyone who has ever visited London, where it is mentioned that it includes the north side of Piccadilly and most of the streets running out of it, also Grosvenor street, Hatfield street and a considerable portion of Curzon street, together with Vigo street, Bolton street and Charge street. In short, the whole of the fashionable and clubland districts of Mayfair is divided between young Sutton and the Duke of Westminster, for, with a few comparatively unimportant exceptions, that which does not belong to one of them is the property of the other. Nor, from the foregoing list of Sir Richard's property ought it to be omitted the considerable area that he owns on the north side of Regent street.

When it is borne in mind that the rents of all this vast property have been accumulating at compound interest, that it is so situated, that it is a period of twenty-one years, and that Sir Richard's expenses of maintenance and education—be it school at Eton—have been very trifling in comparison, it will readily be understood that he comes within the description of "one of the richest men in England."

So that, if he follows the example of his mother and half-brother who visited the side of the water four years ago, and happens to be captured by some beautiful American girl, she may be sure that it is not her money that he is after, for he surely has enough of his own. It was reported, indeed, that he was about to cross the ocean. If he does, it may be confidently asserted that he will arrive quickly and unostentatiously, without any flourish of trumpets, or other proclamation of the fact that he is the possessor of enormous wealth, and is of ancient lineage.

The Suttons are one of the oldest county families in England, and have, during their history, which dates from Tudor times, owned various titles, including that of Lord Lexington and of the Earls of Lyle, whose patronage is Sutton. Among these still pertaining to the family is the Viscountcy of Canterbury, which is now held by the descendants of Lord George Manners, son of the third Duke of Rutland, who, on inheriting the estates of his maternal grandfather, Robert Sutton, assumed the latter's patronage and hereditary bearing. His son was the famous Archbishop of Canterbury, and his son in turn, for his services as speaker of the House of Commons, was created Viscount Canterbury. This peer's only daughter married Richard Sanderson, Baron of Lord Sanderson, the former chief of the foreign office, and of Sir Percy Sanderson, who spent so many years in New York, as consular general of Great Britain.

Strange Story of Photograph
Sir Richard Sutton and his mother have made their principal home at Combermere Abbey in Shropshire, which was inherited by the late Lord Combermere, the late Sir Richard Sutton. Connected with this lease, there is one of the most curious stories that I ever heard of. It concerns the death of Lord Combermere, his body was brought back home, to be buried in the churchyard of the village of Combermere, and placed in the coffin in the library in the chair that used to be the favorite one of the Lord Combermeres who had just died. The person pictured was certainly not in the room when Miss Corbett made the exposure; and in all other respects the photograph came out exactly as she expected it would. Both she and her sister, Lady Hutton, were puzzled over the strange affair, and carefully preserved the picture as a curiosity, regarding it as one of those "freaks of photography" that they had read about. One day a friend who was a near neighbor as well, while looking through the album containing the photograph, that Miss Corbett had taken, remarked: "I see you have your old Lord Combermere, sitting in his library. It is a very artistic and beautiful amateur photograph."

WHEN THE LUNGS ARE WEAK

To every person with weak lungs or who has a family history with records of consumption, a cough or cold is a serious matter. Coughs have a tendency to hang on. They irritate the weakened membranes and prevent healing. There is always the danger that a cold may get a firm foothold and settle on the lungs. It is so easy under these conditions for pneumonia or consumption to develop.

About the surest means of controlling coughs and colds is by the use of Dr. Chase's Syrup of Licenced and Turpentine. This treatment loosens the cough, allays the irritation and inflammation and thoroughly overcomes the disagreeable symptoms. The success of this medicine has given rise to many imitations. It is only natural to suppose that the original possesses merit of an unusual degree.

Combermere Abbey, for so far from being frightened, she was so impressed by the kindly and benign expression on the face in the photograph, that she felt more than ever attached to the place and disinclined to leave it.

RECORD COAL OUTPUT
Gloucester, the Dominion Coal Company's collieries will be approximately 370,000 tons. This will eclipse by some 50,000 tons the best previous April output, and is much in excess of any previous month's tonnage during the winter season. The mines are all in good condition now for producing their maximum tonnage, and it will not be surprising if occasionally the daily output will reach 15,000 tons.

PRUNING THE APPENDIX
What thousands of people are rushed to the hospitals these days with the idea that pruning the appendix will rid them of the cause and effect of wrong habits of eating and living.

We eat too much, take too little outdoor exercise, breathe impure air, and when the system gets loaded with food impurities, which irritate the digestive system and set up inflammation, we are told that the operating table is the only place for us.

Why not prevent appendicitis, as well as acute indigestion, peritonitis and Bright's disease of the kidneys, by keeping the liver active and the bowels regular. Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills cleanse the digestive system of food impurities more quickly than any treatment you can obtain. They awaken the liver and ensure the healthful action of the kidneys and bowels.

Tyrant Makers

By RUTH CAMERON

WHETHER the way for tyranny thereby helps to make a tyrant, and is, therefore, partially responsible for his creation's tyranny. The man who fails to take an intelligent interest in government, and to do what he can to make a good government, paves the way for bad government, and is partially responsible for the evils which result.

The parent who is ever ready to give in to the whims and pamper the tastes, and bow to the moods, of the son or daughter of the family thereby helps to make the child the self-centred, egotistical tyrant which he is likely to become, and is partially responsible for the tyranny under which the home suffers, and the wrong perspective from which the child will ultimately suffer.

"I declare, I don't know what to do with Arleen," writes one of my correspondents, in regard to her sixteen-year-old daughter. "She grows more thoughtless and self-centered and exacting every day. It really seems as if the harder I try to please her, the more exacting and domineering she will become. She will command me about as much as I please her. She has no respect for my feelings. She will not let me say a word to her. She will not let me say a word to her. She will not let me say a word to her."

There is an infant in the world, the more she will expect of you that you should do nothing on earth but try to please her. The more she expects of you, the more she will expect of you. The more she expects of you, the more she will expect of you.

It is told of an overworked farmer's wife, with a family consisting of her husband and five sons, that when she collapsed in the kitchen one hot day, and the village nurse was hastily called in, the latter found six little bean-pots sizzling away in the oven. "For the land's sake!" she inquired. "What are all these bean-pots for?" "Oh!" gasped the farmer's wife, "you see, father won't have any molasses in his beans, and John likes 'em full of molasses; Frank won't eat 'em with molasses, but has to have a little onion; Golden wants lots of pork, and Tom likes Ale like, slammmed the door, and retired to the kitchen. There, it is stated, she at once smashed those six bean-pots, substituted a marmalade pot which she had on hand, and returned to her work, "allowing" to herself that that family would eat their beans that way or not at all. Needless to say they ate them.

THE BOY SCOUTS
The thorough manner in which they are mastering the practical outdoor work sacred to them was demonstrated by the Boy Scouts in their second annual entertainment, which was given in the Opera House on Saturday afternoon and evening. The programme included demonstration of first aid to the injured, by the St. Paul's church troop; bridge building, by the German street school, signalling, by the boys from Centenary church, comedy sketches, Family Troubles, by Y. M. C. A. troop, drilling, boating and fancy marching by the Stone church scouts, and a physical drill by the Trinity church scouts.

GENSUS OF DAIRY INDUSTRIES OF CANADA IN YEAR 1911
The Census and Statistics Bulletin for March, just issued in Ottawa gives the records of butter, cheese and condensed milk as collected at the census of last year. There were 3,028 factories in operation in 1911. The quantity of butter made in the year was 29,875,097 pounds, having a value of $15,982,204. This is 25,818,398 pounds more than in 1910, and the value is more by $8,441,502. The quantity of cheese is 23,912,788 pounds, which is more than at the previous census by 10,170,539 pounds, but the value is less by $600,778. The total value of butter, cheese and condensed milk in 1910 was $39,145,980, and in 1911 it was $59,731,222, being an increase of $20,585,242 in ten years.

THE INCREASED price of factory butter in 1911 is a larger production in 1911 than in 1910, and this was made especially in Quebec at the cost of a lower production elsewhere. The price of butter was increased by the lower rate of duty on cream in the United States, which encouraged the production of butter in this country. The number of condensed milk factories in operation increased from four in 1910 to twelve in 1911, and the value of product increased from $39,220 to $1,827,874. There are now six factories in Ontario with a product value of $1,235,000, two in Nova Scotia with $123,800, two in Quebec with $275,000, one in British Columbia with $4,200, and one in Prince Edward Island with $20,000. In 1910 there were two factories in Nova Scotia and one each in P. E. Island and Ontario.

Daily Hints For the Cook

SCALLOPED FRUIT CUPS
You can serve fruits in scalloped orange or grapefruit cups, salads in cutcombs scalloped, lengthwise, less in scalloped centaloups, and many other attractive ways. Press the fruit firmly on one end of the cutting blade and slowly roll toward the other end. A slight twisting motion will separate the halves. After using, the cutter should be rinsed under a faucet. The blade is made of metal that will not rust.

WHIPPED CREAM PIE
One-third cup of butter, one cup of sugar, two eggs, one-half cup of milk, one and two-thirds cups of entire wheat flour, two teaspoons of baking powder. Cream the butter and add the sugar gradually, then the eggs well beaten. Cream the butter and add the sugar gradually, then the eggs well beaten.
