Miramichi Advance.

CHATHAM, N. B., DECEMBER 5, 1895.

THE BITER BITTEN.

My uncle, Sir Charles Weathering, was an old gentleman who owned a large estate in Berkshire, and was very much respected by the people of his neighborhood. He was kind and indulgent to his tenants, many of whom would sacrifice their lives at any time to be of service to him. The country gentry for miles around were on the most intimate terms with him, and all spoke of him in praise.

There was one man, however, for whom my uncle had a decided antipathy. That was the Reverend B. H. Caldwell, who occupied the glebe lands adjoining my uncle's estate. They had been friends for a number of years but quarrelled at last over some trivial matter and it made my uncle's enemy for life. Uncle was a good man in most respects, but he had this one failing—if he once took a dislike to a man he never forgot it; and on this occasion his first impulse drove him to seek revenge upon the Reverend Mr. Caldwell.

At this time, in England, sectarianism was very much looked down upon by the Episcopal Church, and as the Reverend Mr. Caldwell was a rigid Episcopalian, my uncle's plan of annoyance was a terrible trial to the venerable gentleman who had been his family minister for twenty years.

The Episcopal church was within fifty yards of my uncle's estate and was the only place of worship the family had ever attended, therefore it was a serious affair to be at enmity with the rector. But uncle was equal to the occasion. He invited several prominent Methodist ministers to come on a visit, and very much to their surprise, offered to give them the ground on which to build a large church.

Of course this piece of magnanimity was eagerly accepted, and drew down upon his head the everlasting thanks of the whole denomination. The work was commenced at once, and was soon completed, under the care of the newly made convert, who took particular pains to have the building erected in full view of the Episcopal rectory.

Little did the Methodists know with what malignant satisfaction the projector of this scheme gloated over the success of his plot, and the terrible anguish of spirit that the Reverend Mr. Caldwell suffered then and during the remainder of his life.

A brilliant young minister was duly inducted in the new church, and soon became the spiritual light of the district over which he presided. He was a bright, handsome young man, and had the good fortune to be unmarried. This made him a general favorite at my uncle's house for reasons which will appear presently.

flatter myself. Now, Maud, this is all nonsense, for you to desire further delay. Charles has been quite anxious of late, and he vows that he won't wait any longer."

"Well, dear papa, if you are in such a hurry to get rid of me I must submit; but you must give me a month for you know it will take all of that time to get my wedding dresses made."

"Ah, that's better. You are a dear, sensible girl, and you shall have a whole month, whether Charles likes it or not."

As soon as Maud found herself in her own room, and the door carefully locked, she indulged in a fit of crying. She felt as if the time had already come when she must separate from her heart's choice, and marry a man for whom she had no love.

"What is to be done?" she asked herself over and over again, but in her grief she could see nothing but darkness and misery.

At last a faint hope broke in upon the troubled mind—she would see her lover, and tell him all that had passed between herself and her father. Hope seemed to tell her that the object of her hopes would be able to suggest a remedy from the impending doom.

The meeting between the lovers that afternoon must have been satisfactory, for Maud returned to her father's house quite flushed, and evidently happy.

She did not appear at the breakfast table next morning, and her maid, being sent to look for her mistress, returned with the awful intelligence that Maud was not to be found. The room was untenant, and the bed was made up as the maid had left it the evening previous.

had soon that sign they would all have been there.

"Release the prisoners," said the alcalde, while his sides shook with laughter.

"OUGHT TO KNOW—Lady—'Where is the agent for these flats?' 'Man at Door—'I can rent the flats, mum.' 'Are the rents reasonable?' 'Yes, mum.' 'What sort of a janitor have you?' 'A very good one, mum.' 'Is he polite and attentive?' 'Yes, mum.' 'Does he ever steal from the market basket of the tenants?' 'Never, mum.' 'He's a good Christian man, is he?'

"Yes, mum. A politer, more attentive, honest, or more Christian man never lived, mum."

"I am delighted to hear that. Where is he now?" "In him, mum."—"N. Y. Weekly."

BLUNT TRUTH—An exchange despatching asks, "Cannot something be done to prevent our young ladies from being insulted on the streets at night? Yes, something can be done, and it cannot be done too soon either. Just have the girl's mother tuck her into her little bed about 8 p.m., and lock the door on her."—P. M.'s Sun.

DISEASED LUNGS
CURED BY TAKING
AYER'S Cherry Pectoral.
"I contracted a severe cold, which settled in my lungs, and I did what a doctor told me, but it did not do any good. I then consulted a doctor, who told me to take Ayer's Cherry Pectoral. The medicine he gave me did not seem to do any good, but I continued to take it, and in a few days I was cured. I had felt that the bottle I was cured by was Ayer's Cherry Pectoral, Orangeville, Ont. Good medicine, and I would recommend it to all who are afflicted with Coughs, Croup, Whooping Cough, and all other Lung Affections."
