

president: "The directors, owing to unforeseen circumstances, brought about by the bad management of the late board, are forced to inform you that it will be impossible to operate the mill to make twine for the harvest of 1904, further than to put on the market the 100 tons of twine, in the warehouse here, and 57 tons in Manitoba, left over from last year. We trust that shareholders using twine will make it a point to use Walkerton twine and thereby assist the directors to get the mill into operation this fall for the harvest of 1905." The Telescope explains further that the company is indebted to the bank, and although the amount is not large, the bank does not care about advancing any more money until this old score is wiped out. It is informed that money for twine sold during the past year is coming in quite freely, and that the indebtedness to the bank is becoming smaller every day. The company hopes to be able to make twine as usual for the harvest of 1905.
