A disease that ends in a quest growth on the very poll or top of the head of the horse is called "poll evil." The trouble is quickly observed owing to the habit of the horse in stretching his neck straight out in front and makes a pitiable spectacle of the patient. There is little left to do for the poor creature except to put it out of its misery.

A common blemish is the curb, a rounding of the bone of the hind leg just below the back point of the hock. This formation does not injure the serviceableness of the driver appreciably. If patiently rubbed when it first appears, the curb can be reduced, the bone absorbing the growth if not too prominent.

German Dress Reform.

German Dress Reform.

A correspondent writes on the subject of "Dress Reform Made in Germany:"

"A friend of mime who is just back from Berlin tells me that she paid a visit to the Dress Reform Exhibition which was held there, and anyone who is familiar with the ordinary types of Teutonic tollette will certainly agree that reform of some kind is a 'felt want' in the Happy Fatherland.

"Unfortunately, however, in the country where sausages and sauerkraut are more plentiful than a sense of humor, it appears that this exhibition was held strictly on the principle enunciated by 'old-man Aesop' in his fable of the fox that had loft its tail. The object of this Dress Reform Exhibition was not to inspire the dumpy Deutsch ladies with a desire to dress themselves in a rather less dowdy manner, but to convert the rest of the feminine world to the style of costume which earns for the German lady the dictinction of being reckoned the worst-dressed woman in Europe.

"It need hardly be said that the first article of feminine tollette which they propose to abolish is the much abused corset, though no one would ever discover from personal observation that such a thing had ever been heard of by the female subjects of 'Fidgety Will.' Along with the corset they are anxious to get rid of pointed shoes and tight-fitting kid gloves, the ideal Teutonic Venus being apparently an amorphous, waistless goddess, splay-footed like a Dachshund, and, like the village blacksmith, possessing apparently an amorphous, waistless goddess, splay-footed like a Dachshund, and, like the village blacksmith, possessing large and sinewy hands, clad comfortably in clumsy cotton!

"The skirt is to be short and shapeless, and is to be so arranged that all the weight shall fall from the shoulders instead of from the hips." Nothing tight-fitting, but everything sloppy and shapeless' seems to be the watchword of this German dress reform. The intelligent traveler, however, will rub his or her eyes and ask, Why all this fuss to organize a system of carrying coa tics are already the leading features of a German woman's costume, and to make her any more dowdy and shapeless would be almost an impossibility. It seems curious that, while Vienna is, in the opinion of many competent judges, the best-dressed city in Europe, owing to the fact that the Viennese ladies pride themselves on the possession of most carefully-trained and perfectly-corseted figures, the ladies of the rival capital pride themselves on the exact opposite, and enjoy in consequence the reputation of holding the record for bad dressing."

Absence of Mind.

"Now be sure not to forget," said a lady, playfully shaking her finger at her husband as he rose to stretch his legs between acts; and turning to a lady friend, she explained, "He is so absent-minded."

"Does he forget to post your letters?"

"Oh, no, indeed! He is so absentminded I never entrust any to him. But

"How sad! I wonder if all men are so afflicted?"

"My husband is. Why, I remember one day he arose from the dinner-table, and, feeling a slight uneasiness in his eyes, began operations upon them with his toothpick, nearly destroying his sight." "How unfortunate!"

"How unfortunate!"
"Xes; and one night I asked him to replenish the fuel in the grate, and in a fit of abstraction he brought in a pail of water and poured it on the fire, bringing ruin to everything."
"O-o-h, how perfectly awful!"
"But I hadn't begun to tell you the worst about my husband. Why, it was only a week after our marriage, while walking along arm-in-arm, he so far forgot himself as to imagine he had an extremely burdensome bundle under his arm, and offered a boy a dime to carry it for him.
"But where's yer bundle, mister" the little fellow enquired. And will you believe it we have the property of the little fellow enquired. Venezuelan Hospitality.

Venezuelan Hospitality.

During a recent visit to Caracas, a member of the British Parliament says that he was accorded interviews with several of the leading members of the Venezuelan Government, who showed him every courtesy, and gave a dinner in his honor. That night, shortly after he retired at a late hour, he was awakened from his sleep by a noise in his room, and saw, as he thought, one of his hosts disappear through the bedroom window leading to the verands. Concluding that this was a polite custom of the country, the visitor returned to sleep, but in the morning he found that he had been robbed. The Englishman went straight to the seat of government, and complained to one of the ministers, who expressed his dismay, and was thereupon informed that the person seen in the room bore a resemblance to himself. "Very strange," replied the minister, "for there is no one alive who resembles me." "In that case," rejoined his visitor, dryly, "you should have no difficulty in securing the restoration of my property." Later in the day the Englishman discovered an anonymous package upon his room table. Opening the cover, he found all the missing articles save his gold-edged cigar-case and one of his fob. charms—a little goddess in diamonds and emeralds.

The Irishman's Story.

There were some sporty wheelmen tell-ing stories at a club.

And each one told a better than the last.

Another said, "That wasn't very fast!"

In response to a missionary's appeals for various articles for us on an African farm, a milking-stool was sent to him from England. He gave it to the negro whose duty it was to milk the cows, with injunctions to use it. On the first day the negro returned home from the cow-sheds, bruised and battered, but with an empty pail. When the missionary asked for an explanation, the negro replied: "Milk stool very nice, massa, but she won't sit on it!"

A Columbus, Ohio, pastor called on one of his parishioners, whose six-year-old boy is a bright youngster. Freddie had previously heard his mother say that the pastor was very successful in saving souls. During a pause in the conversation, Freddie, who was sitting on the pastor's knee, asked: "Do you save souls?" "Yes, Freddie," replied the man of the cloth. "Will you tell me," went on Freddie, seriously, "how many souls you got saved up?"

Mr. C. F. Stanbury relates in "The Barrister" many stories of Tom Nolan, the counselor who for years kept the New York bar laughing at his conscious and unconscious drolleries. One of the best is the following: One Nolan was arguing a case in behalf of clients who were sailors, and while in the midst of an exhaustive display of lore on nautical matters, he was interrupted by the court. "How comes it, counselor, that you pos-"How comes it, counselor, that vot pos sess such a vast knowledge of the sea?"

In a series of sketches, entitled "Lights and Shadows in a Hospital," Mrs. Terton and shadows in a Hospital, Mrs. Ferton tells of a melancholy man, depressed with rheumatism, in her cottage hospital, whom she wanted to cheer by reading. Ordinary hospital literature was no good. At last, said the nurse: "I shall read him "Three Men In a Boat," shall read him 'Three Men In a Boat,' and if that doesn't amuse him, I shall give him up as hopeless." So she read, till finally "a reluctant smile came over his face, and he said, with slow satisfaction: 'I do think they be three rum 'uns.' That was the turning point in his illness. He recovered completely, and left the hospital a bright and cheerful man.

At the time, now some years ago when subscriptions were being solicited for the erection of a statue in New York city to George Washington, a gentleman called on Russell Sage to secure a contribution. On learning the object of the visit the rich man exclaimed: "Washington! Washington! Washington! Washington! Washington! Washington does not need a statue. I keep him enshrined in my heart." In vain were the caller's solicitations, and he was naturally indignant at the parsimony of the multi-millionaire. "Well, Mr. Sage" he remarked, quietly, as he rose to leave, "all I can say is, that if the Father of his Country is in the position in which you describe him, he is in a tight place."

Quizzing a boy is not always so easy

you describe him, he is in a tight place."

Quizzing a boy is not always so easy as it seems. The Cincinnati "Enquirer" gives an instance in which a business man of that city came out second best in a passage at repartee with a boy hamed Claude who looks after the hatrack in a well-known restaurant.

Mr. Smith started out of the restaurant after enjoying his meal, and was seized, as Claude handed him his hat, with the impulse to quiz the lad.

"I don't know, sir," was the answer.

"Well, then, why do you hand it to me if you don't know whether it is my hat or not?" asked Mr. Smith, sharply.

"Because, it's the one you handed to me when you came in," answered Claude.

Claude.

At the watch night of the Authors' Club on the occasion of the outgoing of the old and the incoming of the new year last winter, the subject discussed was "Fame and Its Blunders." Each member received the privilege of explaining why he was not so famous as he should be, or why some other member was more famous than he. According to the "Bookman," the late Frank Stockton, when his turn came, said that he was quite satisfied. Referring to his long drudgery upon magazines and newspapers, and his final breaking loose into literature, he illustrated his point by reciting the following lines:

There was an old monk of Siberia,

reciting the following lines:
There was an old monk of Siberia,
Whose life it grew drearier and drearier,
Till he broke from his cell
With a hell of 1 yell,
And cloped with the Mother Superior, which lines are supposed to symbolize

Senator William P. Frye was once talking to the celebrated naturalist, Agassiz, of his fishing experiences. "Among my triumphs," said he, "was the capture of a speckled trout that weighed fully eight pounds." Dr. Agassiz smiled, and said: "Reserve that for the credulous and convivial circles of rod and reel celebrants, but spare the feelings of a sober scientist." Frye insisted that he was not exaggerating, but Agassiz refused to be gulled. "My dear Mr. Frye," he said, "permit me to inform you that Salvalinus fontinalis never attains that extraordinary weight. The creature you caught could not have been a speckled trout. All the authorities on iehthyology would disprave your claim." "All I can say to that," replied Senator Frye, "is that there are, then, bigger fish in Maine than are dreamed of in your noble science." The next season, while fishing in the Maine woods, Frye caught a handsome speckled trout that weighed nine pounds, and sent it to Dr. Agassiz. A few days later he tramped to the station, where he found an epigrammatic message awaiting him from the great scientist, which read: "The science of a lifetime kicked to death by a fact. Agassiz."

An Englishman went into a restaurant in a New England town, and was served for the first course with a delicacy unknown to him. So he asked the walter what it was, and the waiter replied: "It's bean soup, sir," where upon the Englishman, in high indignation, responded: "I don't care what it's been; I want to know what it is."—Philadelphia "Times."

Seeing a man in the act of leaving his box during the delivery of one of the actor's best speeches, he shouted out: "Hi, you sir, do you know there is another act?" The offender was equal to the occasion, however. He turned to the actor and answered, cheerfully: "Oh, yes-that's why I am going!"
