

until industries were established in Canada on a large scale, but the prices would soon come down as the result of home competition while the farmers would be permanently benefited by the increased consumption of farm products in Canadian towns and cities.

---