BOWELS BAD, LIVER TORPID? CASCARETS IF CONSTIPATED, BILIOUS, HEADACHY, STOMACH SOUR, GET A BOX OF CAS CARETS. You men and women who can't get feeling right—who have headache coated tongue, foul taste and foul breath, dizziness, can't sleep, can't eat, are bilious, nervous and upset, bothered with a sick, gassy disordered stomach or have backache and feel worn out. Are you keeping your bowels clean with Cascarets, or merely forcing a passageway every few days with salts, cathartic pills or castor oil? This is important. Cascarets work while you sleep; cleanse and regulate the stomach; remove the sour, undigested and fermenting food and foul gases; take the excess bile from the liver and carry out of the system all the constipated waste matter and poison in the intestines and bowels. A Cascart to-night will straighten you out from any drug store will keep your stomach sweet; liver and bowels regular and head clear for months. Don't forget the children. They love Cascarets because they taste good—do good—never gripe or sicken.

HARRISBURG From our own correspondent. The Ontario Portland Cement Co. of Blue Lake have closed up their works here for the season. George Baker left for Galt on Thursday last where he has secured a situation on the G. T. R. at the station. Mr. Edward Wreakes, of Hamilton, spent Sunday at his home here. Miss Kelly of Paris spent a few days last week in the village. Mr. and Mrs. F. Vrooman and Master George will leave in a few days to spend the rest of the winter in the south. Large quantities of hay and grain are being daily shipped from this station. Mr. and Mrs. Robert Jarvis, who have been visiting with friends in this locality for the last week left on Friday for their home in Dunnville. Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Newman of Listowel who have been visiting with friends near the village for the last week, left on Tuesday for their home.

IT PREVENTS SORE THROAT. No simpler way to kill a cold and stave off a fever than by applying Nervilleine—rub it in freely, and then put on a Nervilleine Porous Plaster on the chest. These remedies hunt out pain, destroy every trace of congestion, cure the cold and tend to bronchitis. Thousands find Nervilleine inestimably the best remedy for pain, aches, bruises, neuralgia, sciatica, colds and winter ills. Not only is it penetrating and powerful, but it is safe and economical. All dealers sell Nervilleine. Beware of substitutes.

CALISTA'S CHRISTMAS How a Girl Was Changed From Selfishness to Charity. By CLARISSA MACKIE. For twelve long years Calista Thorp had fought against that grim fate which had removed her loved ones within the space of a short twelve-month and left her hopeless and dry-eyed in the midst of an empty house, even now echoing with happy voices stiller forever. She was a frail little woman, with a bruised heart which she hid behind a cold exterior, defiant blue eyes and a bitter tongue. All the softness of her youth had congealed. She was estranged from happiness. Twelve times since that awful year Calista hung the stockings before the fireplace in the sitting room; her large sock, Bobby's two stockings (gaping expectantly), little Ann's white ones and, last of all, her own slim black one. And twelve times with shivering eyes and swelling heart she had Calista filled them. Then when Christmas morning dawned and she awoke to the bitterness that awaited her in the silent house and in the sight of the row of bulging stockings hanging before the fireplace she would give down to the sitting room and tear them from the shelf and empty each one of its burden. The bureau drawers in the slant wood bedroom were filled with the little treasures Calista had bought for her loved ones. Again it was Christmas eve, and Calista had come home from shopping. Her arms were full of parcels, and the snowflakes powdered the dark hair that framed her small pale face—paler than usual, for the young minister had just, at the corner and walked home with her. At the gate he had timidly relieved himself of a burden that troubled him. He had reproached with Calista Thorp because of her selfishness. Her cheeks burned as she remembered how his reproaches had reflected the moonlight until they seemed like luminous supernatural eyes reading her soul. He had ventured only a few words, and his concluding sentence still rang in her ears: "There is no room in your heart for others outside your loved ones who have gone! God grant you a happy Christmas, Miss Calista!" He was very young and very poor and very much in earnest, and had not a young wife and family at home to wait on him, yet he had found time to caution himself over Calista Thorp, the most skeptical member of his flock. For the first time a light broke in on Calista's brain. For the first time she saw herself in her true character. She had been giving herself up to those who were gone she was hiding her talent in a napkin. It was not those loved ones she was benefiting; it was the living she was denying. What right had she to keep all for the dead, who could use nothing she would give them? Was she not in giving it to them hoarding it for herself? All of a sudden a realization of her true position rushed upon her with resistless force. And how long had she been hoarding in this world of her own selfish making? Twelve years. A shame came in her heart that she had all this while taken no interest in a single living being at Christmas time. There were the children among her relatives, the children of best friends, but above all, the children of the poor. When she thought of the many little ones whom even a penny toy would delight she was seized with a desire on this Christmas to wipe out the stains. The parcels reached to the door—the pipe which her father would never smoke, the soft wool which her mother's fingers would never knit, the toys with which Bobby might not play, the doll which could not afford little Ann any delight. The next morning, when Christmas broke over the world, Calista Thorp was stirring around her house. Two great baskets were filled with gifts from the overflowing drawers in the slant bedroom, and Calista's best sock and hat lay on the sofa. The porch was a throng of many away on the highway, and a snowplow had leveled a broad track to the very door. So Calista, clad in her best, put on her overshoes and started forth, a basket in either hand. She was quite pale and tired when she turned into the high white gate and advanced up the path, bordered on either side with gloomy cedar trees. Dr. Keyes was the overseer of the clovefield posthouse, and it was common that his children of best friends of his kind in this state. Breakfast was being served in the long dining hall when Calista rang the bell, and when the door opened the bluff, brown eyed doctor himself stood before her. "Merry Christmas, Miss Calista! You are playing Santa. Change this morning! I am glad of that because some of my old people are feeling very blue today." He relieved her of the basket and led her into the cheery warmth of his comfortable office, where Calista sat down before the glowing stove.

WISDOM OF A GREAT PAINTER. We always like to know what a great man has said about his work and how he feels about other things that are of interest to every one. Fortunately, Meissonier left a record of many of his feelings and opinions, published as the "Conversations" of all the painters. Rembrandt was his favorite. Among his sayings were the following: "Let well enough alone" is the motto of the laity. "The man who leaves good work behind adds to the inheritance of the human race." "The master is an artist whose works never repeat those of some other artist." "I would have drawing made the basis of education in all schools. It is the universal language." "No artist would paint if he knew he never would be able to show his work. It is no human eye would ever rest upon it." "I never sign a picture until my whole soul is satisfied with my work." "To will is to do has been my motto. I have always wished, Oh, how I give the best time that can never be made up. As I grow older I work harder than ever." C. L. Harlow, II, St. Nicholas.

THE POSTAGE STAMP. The little pink square in the corner of your letter is quite a veteran, for the year 1818 marks the 75th birthday of the postage stamp. Sir Rowland Hill of England, was the son of a poor school teacher in the days when letters were expensive luxuries. Many a time, when a boy, he had been told of notices which the coming of the postman went anxiously for, for a scanty purse it was not always possible to produce the money to pay for a letter which he-day would cost her not a cent, for postage was never prepaid in those days.

Acquiring a Reputation. Archbishop Howley, who lived in the eighteenth century, most unjustly got the reputation of being a weakling. The explanation is that the Duke of Cumberland, who fought the battle of Culloden and who was unexpectably profane, once wrote him a letter, which he refused to get his assistance in detaching a certain bill which he disliked. He returned to the House of Lords, saying "I have written a letter to the Duke of Cumberland, and he says he'll see the promoters to—before he'll vote for the bill." As a matter of fact, all the profanity had been supplied, quite in the ordinary run of conversation by the duke.

His Stipulation. Before giving his consent to the Great Western Railway to build a railway bridge across a part of his property, a landowner stipulated that it should be constructed of stone which should be built and should consist of three elliptical arches. The bridge which was successfully completed, despite the fact that it was in England—perhaps the only one of its kind in England—perhaps in the world.

Fall Down on Tobacco. For a wager, Mr. W. G. Buckley, of Wilman, Essex, undertakes to walk thirty-five miles in ten hours and to smoke three ounces of tobacco on the way. He completed the journey in the stipulated time, but failed to smoke all the tobacco.

A GARDEN OF EDEN. Curious Customs of African Natives Told By An Explorer. Interesting facts about an almost unknown race were related by the Royal Geographical Society by Mr. Felix Oawa. He made a long journey last winter to the Victoria Nyanza, to investigate, on behalf of the British Museum, some Micoon deposits near Karungu, on the east coast of the lake. For five weeks he lived among natives, a district of the Victoria Nyanza, and his account of their habits and their utter lack of self-consciousness in this respect, just as if they were living in the Garden of Eden before the Fall. At the same time their standard of morality was conspicuously higher than that of neighboring tribes in East Africa. As a consequence, they were a vigorous race, increasing in numbers, while the Mandingo owing to their lax morals were dying out.

Together they distributed the contents of the two baskets, and Calista found her tongue saying soft pleasant and her cold nose responding warmly to grateful smiles. She saw her mother's kindly look and her father's approving nod in the faces of many of these indigent old people, and the delight of Bobby and little Ann were repeated tenfold by the orphaned poor children of the doctor's household. "You have been an angel in disguise to them this Christmas day," said the doctor as he carried Calista home in his sleigh that evening, for Calista had stayed to the dinner of port, tenderloin and apple sauce, with vegetables and many dainties contributed by the good over-seer from his own scanty pocket.

Calista Thorp's house was empty no longer. There was always room for some broken soul from the poorhouse—some one who dropped in the atmosphere which could never be inhaled from the institution and who needed comfort and encouragement before taking up the burden of life and attaining independence in the end.

The following Christmas Calista welcomed as an old friend by the inmates of the poorhouse. At her bidding each one had hung his or her stocking on a line stretched before the dormitory doors, and that evening Calista and Dr. Keyes had filled them all. Calista's blue eyes were shining with happiness as the doctor drove her home under the Christmas stars.

"We remembered every one," she said contentedly, leaning back among the soft robes. "Every one?" he repeated doubtfully. "Why, who have we forgotten?" "Me," he said gravely. Calista's heart thumped painfully at the new note in his deep voice. "You have forgotten me, Calista. I have given you my heart. This is my gift. You have God's gift, too, the love of my poor people and his love in your heart. I, too, want a gift." There was a hushed silence then until Calista found courage to ask shyly, "What shall I give to you—my best friend?" "Give me a place in your heart, Calista. I must be there also. We will work together. Surely you have room in your heart for me too!" He leaned over and looked in her eyes, where joy shone serene. She gave her hand into his with a glad plea.

"There is room in my heart for you, Henry—room for the memory of my dear ones, room for the whole world!"
