

Not Honored at Home.

As water seeks its level, so does the village instinctively tend to maintain a certain moral and intellectual uniformity.

In one of Boston's prominent dry goods establishments yesterday, while a lady was making some purchases, her attention was called to a collyony between a prospective purchaser and a salesman.

—Young Man—I cannot understand, sir, why you permit your daughter to see me for breach of promise.

—Court officer (to Queen Victoria)—There's an American gent here as what wants to see your majesty.

—Ignatius Donnelly's repartee is quick. Once when he was delivering a political speech some one hurled a cabbage at him.

For Sale and To Let.

THE Steam Tannery and Machinery owned by the Frederickson Tanning Company, King St., Fredericton.

Valuable Farm and Marsh For Sale.

THE subscriber offers for sale his Farm at Second Westcock, containing about 300 acres of land.

FOR SALE.

THE PREMISES occupied by the subscriber in Sackville, consisting of House, with outbuildings and iced.

To Rent.

THE house and grounds formerly the residence of the late Reuben Chase, Esq., Upper Sackville.

House and Lot For Sale or To Let.

THIS desirable property formerly owned by Alex. Johnston, is situated at Upper Sackville, convenient to School, Church, Store and Post Office.

For Sale.

THE PREMISES occupied by me in this town, consisting of a Dwelling House, Shop, Office, Outhouses and Wharf.

For Sale.

THE subscriber is prepared to loan money on good security at reasonable rates.

SUMMER GOODS!

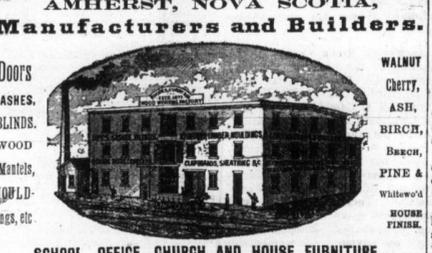

WE HAVE NOW THE Best Assortment of Dress Muslins. PRINTED INDIA LINENS, NEW LAMA CLOTHS, CASHMERE FINISHED PRINTS, WORKED SPOTTED MUSLINS, FRENCH SATENS, CHAMBRAYS, FRENCH.

NEW SPRING GOODS

5 Cases London and New York Hats and Helmets, 4 Cases Cloths and Tweeds, Half a Car Load of Trunks and Valises.

CHAPMAN BROTHERS, AMHERST

Manufacturers and Dealers in all kinds of Builders' Materials.

SCHOOL, OFFICE, CHURCH AND HOUSE FURNITURE.

Manufacturers of and Dealers in all kinds of Builders' Materials.

Spring Trade. NEW GOODS.

WHITE COTTONS, every grade and price; WHITE SHEETINGS, GREY SHEETINGS, PILLOW COTTONS, plain and circular; COTTON ADIES, plain and checked.

New Goods in all Departments.

These prices are expected to arrive during this month.

A. EVERITT, Wholesale Dry Goods Warehouse, 94, 95 and 96 Germain Street.

Burdock Blood Bitters.

WILL CURE OR RELIEVE BRUISES, DIZZINESS, SHIPFEVER, DROPPY, INDIGESTION, FLUTTERING OF THE HEART, RHEUMATISM, ACIDITY OF THE STOMACH, HEADACHE, OF THE SKIN, AND every species of disease arising from disordered LIVER, KIDNEY, STOMACH, BOWELS OR BLOOD.

JUST RECEIVED.

WE HAVE NOW IN STOCK: Oakum, Tar, Pitch, Herring Nets, Rope, Oil Cloths.

WHITE LEAD, (Warranted), Drop Black and other Paints, Boiled and Raw Oils, best quality of VARNISHES, in Japan, Furniture, Oak Gearing, Rubbing, and best Finishing. A full stock of Boots, Shoes and Rubbers, Ready-Made Clothing, Hats and Caps.

WALL PAPERS, House Furniture in Bed Rooms, Suits, &c. To arrive: Timothy, Clover, and Garden SEEDS.

WE respectfully invite inspection. E. C. GOODEN & CO. Baie Verte, April 12th, 1887.

TELEPHONES!

HAVING entered upon the manufacture of all forms of TELEPHONIC APPARATUS we are prepared to make arrangements for installing Telephone Exchanges.

Our new Telephone embodies improvements never before introduced (all of which are thoroughly protected), and articulates with a power and distinctness never before attained.

Money to Loan.

THE subscribers are prepared to loan money on good security at reasonable rates.

Money to Loan.

THE subscribers are prepared to loan money on good security at reasonable rates.

Money to Loan.

CHIGNECTO POST, THURSDAY, SEPTEMBER 22, 1887.

young man laughed, and the lady looked at him frankly and laughed.

"But the train will be full," she said, "and here comes my maid."

"You offered just now to help me, perhaps—"

"You will let me?" he said, joyfully.

"Ah! and you will tell me," said the lady with her pretty foreign accent.

"For the Metropole ought I to go to Victoria or to the Charing Cross?"

"The last name she pronounced as if it had been a spell with an S, thus: Sharing Cross."

"To Charing Cross," replied the young man.

"Charing," said the young lady, as he accompanied her towards the train.

"No, but I thank you for it. Your English is difficult for me," she replied.

"No, but I thank you for it. Your English is difficult for me," she replied.

"No, but I thank you for it. Your English is difficult for me," she replied.

"No, but I thank you for it. Your English is difficult for me," she replied.

"No, but I thank you for it. Your English is difficult for me," she replied.

"No, but I thank you for it. Your English is difficult for me," she replied.

"No, but I thank you for it. Your English is difficult for me," she replied.

"No, but I thank you for it. Your English is difficult for me," she replied.

"No, but I thank you for it. Your English is difficult for me," she replied.

"No, but I thank you for it. Your English is difficult for me," she replied.

"No, but I thank you for it. Your English is difficult for me," she replied.

"No, but I thank you for it. Your English is difficult for me," she replied.

"No, but I thank you for it. Your English is difficult for me," she replied.

"No, but I thank you for it. Your English is difficult for me," she replied.

"No, but I thank you for it. Your English is difficult for me," she replied.

"No, but I thank you for it. Your English is difficult for me," she replied.

"No, but I thank you for it. Your English is difficult for me," she replied.

"No, but I thank you for it. Your English is difficult for me," she replied.

"No, but I thank you for it. Your English is difficult for me," she replied.

"No, but I thank you for it. Your English is difficult for me," she replied.

"No, but I thank you for it. Your English is difficult for me," she replied.

"No, but I thank you for it. Your English is difficult for me," she replied.

"No, but I thank you for it. Your English is difficult for me," she replied.

"No, but I thank you for it. Your English is difficult for me," she replied.

"No, but I thank you for it. Your English is difficult for me," she replied.

"No, but I thank you for it. Your English is difficult for me," she replied.

"No, but I thank you for it. Your English is difficult for me," she replied.

"No, but I thank you for it. Your English is difficult for me," she replied.

"No, but I thank you for it. Your English is difficult for me," she replied.

"No, but I thank you for it. Your English is difficult for me," she replied.

"No, but I thank you for it. Your English is difficult for me," she replied.

"No, but I thank you for it. Your English is difficult for me," she replied.

"No, but I thank you for it. Your English is difficult for me," she replied.

"No, but I thank you for it. Your English is difficult for me," she replied.

"No, but I thank you for it. Your English is difficult for me," she replied.

"No, but I thank you for it. Your English is difficult for me," she replied.

"No, but I thank you for it. Your English is difficult for me," she replied.

"No, but I thank you for it. Your English is difficult for me," she replied.

"No, but I thank you for it. Your English is difficult for me," she replied.

"No, but I thank you for it. Your English is difficult for me," she replied.

"No, but I thank you for it. Your English is difficult for me," she replied.

"No, but I thank you for it. Your English is difficult for me," she replied.

"No, but I thank you for it. Your English is difficult for me," she replied.

"No, but I thank you for it. Your English is difficult for me," she replied.

"No, but I thank you for it. Your English is difficult for me," she replied.

"No, but I thank you for it. Your English is difficult for me," she replied.

"No, but I thank you for it. Your English is difficult for me," she replied.

"No, but I thank you for it. Your English is difficult for me," she replied.

"No, but I thank you for it. Your English is difficult for me," she replied.

"No, but I thank you for it. Your English is difficult for me," she replied.

"No, but I thank you for it. Your English is difficult for me," she replied.

"No, but I thank you for it. Your English is difficult for me," she replied.

"No, but I thank you for it. Your English is difficult for me," she replied.

"No, but I thank you for it. Your English is difficult for me," she replied.

"No, but I thank you for it. Your English is difficult for me," she replied.

"No, but I thank you for it. Your English is difficult for me," she replied.

"No, but I thank you for it. Your English is difficult for me," she replied.

"No, but I thank you for it. Your English is difficult for me," she replied.

"No, but I thank you for it. Your English is difficult for me," she replied.

"No, but I thank you for it. Your English is difficult for me," she replied.

CHIGNECTO POST, THURSDAY, SEPTEMBER 22, 1887.

out came the secret of her visit. "Theophilus," it appears, does not approve of gambling, but when mother was at Monte Carlo she made the acquaintance of Mrs. Yerker, who persuaded her to play, and by some wonderful stroke our mother actually broke the bank! There, Percy does not take your breath away? He is afraid to carry them about with her, and as "Theophilus" knows nothing about them, and she was passing through London she brought them here for you to take charge of them for her. They are in the house now, and it makes me nervous. So I wish you would come home some day, and see them, and I'll tell you for some reason or other she would not hear of it. I never saw such stones. Royce on Friday, and the lady who her lady's husband, helped her to choose them. If mother had been wise she would have had them put in a safe (I cannot afford to buy a safe) all about it, and invested the money. However, she did so, and here I am, in my former letter I told you all this. Mother and General Bradford have gone up to Scotland. I have lots more to tell you, but I'll stop for this time. Mother and General Bradford have gone up to Scotland. I have lots more to tell you, but I'll stop for this time. Mother and General Bradford have gone up to Scotland. I have lots more to tell you, but I'll stop for this time.

"You will let me?" he said, joyfully.

"Ah! and you will tell me," said the lady with her pretty foreign accent.

"For the Metropole ought I to go to Victoria or to the Charing Cross?"

"The last name she pronounced as if it had been a spell with an S, thus: Sharing Cross."

"To Charing Cross," replied the young man.

"Charing," said the young lady, as he accompanied her towards the train.

"No, but I thank you for it. Your English is difficult for me," she replied.

"No, but I thank you for it. Your English is difficult for me," she replied.

"No, but I thank you for it. Your English is difficult for me," she replied.

"No, but I thank you for it. Your English is difficult for me," she replied.

"No, but I thank you for it. Your English is difficult for me," she replied.

"No, but I thank you for it. Your English is difficult for me," she replied.

"No, but I thank you for it. Your English is difficult for me," she replied.

"No, but I thank you for it. Your English is difficult for me," she replied.

"No, but I thank you for it. Your English is difficult for me," she replied.

"No, but I thank you for it. Your English is difficult for me," she replied.

"No, but I thank you for it. Your English is difficult for me," she replied.

"No, but I thank you for it. Your English is difficult for me," she replied.

"No, but I thank you for it. Your English is difficult for me," she replied.

"No, but I thank you for it. Your English is difficult for me," she replied.

"No, but I thank you for it. Your English is difficult for me," she replied.

"No, but I thank you for it. Your English is difficult for me," she replied.

"No, but I thank you for it. Your English is difficult for me," she replied.

"No, but I thank you for it. Your English is difficult for me," she replied.

"No, but I thank you for it. Your English is difficult for me," she replied.

"No, but I thank you for it. Your English is difficult for me," she replied.

"No, but I thank you for it. Your English is difficult for me," she replied.

"No, but I thank you for it. Your English is difficult for me," she replied.

"No, but I thank you for it. Your English is difficult for me," she replied.

"No, but I thank you for it. Your English is difficult for me," she replied.

"No, but I thank you for it. Your English is difficult for me," she replied.

"No, but I thank you for it. Your English is difficult for me," she replied.

"No, but I thank you for it. Your English is difficult for me," she replied.

"No, but I thank you for it. Your English is difficult for me," she replied.

"No, but I thank you for it. Your English is difficult for me," she replied.

"No, but I thank you for it. Your English is difficult for me," she replied.

"No, but I thank you for it. Your English is difficult for me," she replied.

"No, but I thank you for it. Your English is difficult for me," she replied.

"No, but I thank you for it. Your English is difficult for me," she replied.

"No, but I thank you for it. Your English is difficult for me," she replied.

"No, but I thank you for it. Your English is difficult for me," she replied.

"No, but I thank you for it. Your English is difficult for me," she replied.

"No, but I thank you for it. Your English is difficult for me," she replied.

"No, but I thank you for it. Your English is difficult for me," she replied.

"No, but I thank you for it. Your English is difficult for me," she replied.

"No, but I thank you for it. Your English is difficult for me," she replied.

"No, but I thank you for it. Your English is difficult for me," she replied.

"No, but I thank you for it. Your English is difficult for me," she replied.

"No, but I thank you for it. Your English is difficult for me," she replied.

"No, but I thank you for it. Your English is difficult for me," she replied.

"No, but I thank you for it. Your English is difficult for me," she replied.

"No, but I thank you for it. Your English is difficult for me," she replied.

"No, but I thank you for it. Your English is difficult for me," she replied.

"No, but I thank you for it. Your English is difficult for me," she replied.

"No, but I thank you for it. Your English is difficult for me," she replied.

"No, but I thank you for it. Your English is difficult for me," she replied.

"No, but I thank you for it. Your English is difficult for me," she replied.

"No, but I thank you for it. Your English is difficult for me," she replied.

"No, but I thank you for it. Your English is difficult for me," she replied.

"No, but I thank you for it. Your English is difficult for me," she replied.

"No, but I thank you for it. Your English is difficult for me," she replied.

"No, but I thank you for it. Your English is difficult for me," she replied.

"No, but I thank you for it. Your English is difficult for me," she replied.

"No, but I thank you for it. Your English is difficult for me," she replied.

"No, but I thank you for it. Your English is difficult for me," she replied.

"No, but I thank you for it. Your English is difficult for me," she replied.

"No, but I thank you for it. Your English is difficult for me," she replied.

"No, but I thank you for it. Your English is difficult for me," she replied.

CHIGNECTO POST, THURSDAY, SEPTEMBER 22, 1887.

passing a sufficiently tempting temptation.

"Well, in the first place, John, I am in love."

"You are not?" cried Jean.

"I am I tell you," said her brother.

"Complexion a little pale, but exquisite; teeth magnificent; hair glorious; figure neat, tall, well developed; eyes—by Jove, what eyes!"

"Percy, stop! Don't tease me. You are not in earnest!"

"Alter your appearance every day—curl your mustache up, wax it, cut it off—shave your head—do anything—anything you like but fall in love! Dear old Percy, I want to live with you always, and housekeep for you."

"Oh, of course, I know I cannot do any way; some day, of course, you will marry, but not you, dear. Give me a few more years."

"You dear little goose!" cried Hanbury, laughing. "Who is talking of marrying? I said I was in love. Why the two things are so tally different. Nobody ever marries for love nowadays. We fall in love after marriage, you unphilosophical one, with somebody else's wife!"

"You are frivolous," said Miss Hanbury, "and in earnest."

"But so am I," said Percy.

"Then who is this—this person?" asked Miss Hanbury.

"Ab that is what you want to know!" cried Percy, "I wish you would tell Parks not to put so much salt in this anchovy stuff. By the bye," he added, jumping up, "I knew there was something I wanted to ask you about. The diamonds! Where are they? Let me see them."

"Anchovy toast is naturally salt," said Jean, standing up for the cook and her own housekeeping. "If you want to see mother's diamonds come along."

She led the way into her own room. She unlocked a drawer in a wardrobe and took out a leather case.

"There," she said. She raised the cover.

Percy gave an exclamation of astonishment and admiration.

"Did you ever see anything so magnificent as this?" "Look at the size and the setting!"

She took out a superb necklace as she spoke and laid it on his knee.

"And that is not all," she went on, taking out a tray from the case and displaying three beauties. "Look at this emerald and this brooch. And here is a spray for the hair. When mother showed them to me I was dumb with admiration. Fancy their being all hers, Percy, and fancy her breaking the bank!"

"Good gracious, Jean!" cried Percy, "they are fit for crowns. I never saw such stones. Poor little mother! I don't wonder that she was afraid to carry them about with her. They are magnificent—magnificent! That Mr. Yerker must have been a pretty good judge."

"I will look them up again now," said Jean, "and I want you to keep the key. It makes me nervous, so he put the key into his pocket."

"Now tell me you were joking about being in love," pleaded Jean.

"Can't tell you that," said Percy; "but, if you like, I will tell you all about it, and then you can judge whether I have seen enough of the lady for my case to be serious."

He related then his experience of the day before.

"The extraordinary part of it was her knowing my name. Do you believe in clairvoyance, Jean?"

"Certainly not," said Miss Hanbury.

"Well, I think I do," said her brother.

Jean frowned a little.

"It's impossible," said the enthusiastic response. "I wonder how I ever got along without it."

"Well, would you mind giving me a little testimonial to that effect?"

"Certainly not; do it gladly."

So he rolled his sleeves and in an incredibly short time pounded out this: "After Using this automatic Backaction atype writer for three months and over: I unhesitatingly pronounce it pronon no it to be all ad even more than the Manufacture claim for it. During the time I have been in possession n e i, three months; it has none on a than paid for itself in the Saving of time and labor!"

"There you are, sir,"

"Thanks," said the agent, dubiously.

"It's a pretty cold-blooded thing scientifically analyze and describe the kiss, but Henry T. Finch does it; and he seems to feel the magnetism of the subject, by the way he concludes:—"

"Kissing, like every other fine art, has its seasons and its imaginative or intellectual side. Of all parts of the visible body the lips are the most