The Suspensory Bill.

English House of Lords is a lative body essentially, and widely nt from the English House of mons. They bear the same rela-to the latter that the nomdic s of Tartay and other eastern do to remainder of the civion of mankind. They dedetest innovation; they do possible what their fathers what they think they would ne had they been alive now; precate progress, and would ot do anything for which there edent. The Lords stand in otect the prerogatives, real nary, of the aristocraey, while ons do battle for the rights ple, and encroach slowly but on those domains that were sidered the rightful heritage and fortune. But there is a n England, and with each noon it grows stronger, and re of the character of irrewhich if it do not level diswill procure for the people recognition in matters sopolitical to which they are This feeling has for its me of the best thinkers oquent speakers in Britain, a river receiving ever and accessions in its course, it ne at last so mighty that its n who knows anything of of society in England, Scot-eland, will imagine that the the Suspensory Bill in the Lords on Tuesday night, The Tory party will no and his friends has received ent it merited, for we are that the Tory Lords forgot which acknowledges the no emotion, and cheered en the Bill was defeated by to 97. One triumph does decide a campaign, and ordships, civil and spiritual, ably have to fight the battle before long. It is worthy much oratory, rusty from as pointed against the unforspensory Act, and how This, and Archbishop That nthusiasm kindle, and how ng periods flowed from his e first time in debate, perears, as he resisted the onon the Church.

appointments will continue ade in the Irish Church, which the object of Mr. Gladstone's suspend until the first of Au-869. But there may be changes then which will warrant the in passing any Act favoring the ablishment of the Irish Church, er perhaps show them the dan refusing to do so. If Disraeli to the people next fall on this there is a strong presumption following in Parliament will smaller than it is now, and not be surprised to hear of ish Church question being out as persistently, as despe-and as successfully for the as was Lord John Russell's able Reform Bill.

"SCARE"-A correspondent of nam Planet writing from Dawn nishes an account of a very big which the people of that village a few days ago. A boy galloped ting, that there were "Fenians Peter Clarke's," and sped on his of raising the country at a speed ould have left John Gilpin behind. cried, women screamed, and the of the volunteers got his men noble fellow mounted his horse No. 3, DAY'S OLD BLOCK ling them that he was with them way, and had not been heard of time of writing. When the com ched the house designated which out two miles from the village they it deserted, but the crockery was milk spilt over the floor, and and tables upset. A boy who had fit in the house said that the damdone by an armed man who had re a thousand Fenians in the was likely the fellow's e boy ran and told a neighanother on horseback, we the people of Dawr st scare they have had Ridgeway.

WELLINGTON GREY AND BRUCE RAILWAY.

(Special Despatch to the Evening Mercury)

WALKERTON, June 30th, 1868.

At the meeting last night a resolution expressive of sympathy culoigizing the energy of the Toronto men and endorsing the action of the County Council, was passed. The action of the County Council, was passed. The action of the County Council was thoroughly non-committal, as Mr. Laidlaw in his speech last night over and over again characterized the action of Bruce in the matter is not just nor generous, and not liberal. It is difficult to believe that he can feel at all clated over the cautious course adopted by the County Council, as I heard some body remark the other day. To make any more speeches proving that the county of Bruce requires a railway, that the command of different markets ensured by a route to Guelph is an advantage beyond all ordinary calculations, and that the broad gauge is better adapted than the narrow gauge to the circumstances of these counties, is but labor lost. On all these points public opinion here has undoubtedly reached a settled conclusion, and the people now listen, with ill disguised weariness, to arguments proving what nineteen men out of twenty do not need to have proved to them any more. The situation in Bruce has become an exceedingly simple one, and easy to undeastand. The people are overwhelminly in favor of the broad gauge line to Guelph, but will take a narrow gauge railway to Toronto rather than no railway at all:

Another point is, they want a railway immediately, and are looking with the very intensity of impatience to see something actually done at the eastern end. This latte. circumstance, once made apparent, a large and liberal bonus from the county, in a lump, may be depended on for a certainty.

POLITICAL ITEMS .- The Globe's Ottawa Political Items.—The Globe's Ottawa correspondent says:—It is reported that Sir. John A. Macdonald is going to Toronto to arrange the Judicial changes. Chief Justice Draper is anxious to retire, and it Mr. Vankoughnet is made Chief Justice, of course there will be the Chancellorship to fill up. Another report is that Sir John goes to Toronto to reconcile the Conservative aristrocracy to the appointment of the Republican Howland. Indeed it is said the swearing in of the Governor will be deferred for a month until matters become more screen. Mr. Howland is anxious for the office and holds Sir John to his written promise.
