Rubbing It In

A large crowd of Londoners spent the half-holiday at Port Stanley yesterday, and in the evening when the crowds were returning through St. Thomas and the results of yesterday's ball games were made known, an impromptu celebration was held in the Railway City, much to the disgust of the residents of that

About 50 London young men formed a parade and marched up Talbot street in St. Thomas, yelling for London, and promising all sorts of beatings for the Saints in the series which opens in this city today. The Traction cars were all packed by London crowds, as were the P. M. trains, and the trip through the streets of St. Thomas was just one shouting triumph. No opportunity was overlooked to "rub it in" on the residents of the city that supports the Ortmen.
