TULL SAXT OF THE GREAT AFRICAN FXPLOKEL'S LETTER.

Friendly Natives Give Stanley an 6va tion-A Populous and Wealthy Land-The Natives Know Who their Ber

Extracts of a letter from Stanley, the at African explorer, to a friend in Boston, have been published. The following is the in full. It is dated Starley Pool, Congo niver. July 14. You must have read the sensational tele gram that appoared in the English papers, stating that one of our stations had been attacked, and the chief of the expedition Dutch house which, strange to say, has joined our numerous antsgonists, and as the Dutch are located at the mouth of the Congo, the slightest rumor of trouble is exaggerated. It was to this silly telegram that I am indebted for being despatched so suddeply to Congo again, when leaves the several millions. The heirs number 1000. and up to Congo again, when I was very mufit as you know. The news was grave, it is true, but not of the character we were rold. The chief had been shot in the arm, but no station had been attacked. Our chief was, however, heartily disliked, and it seems that the subs combined to discourage him. This proved successful, and the left the expedition without a responsible head, and for the post there were half a ozea clamorous claimants. It even became isorganized, for no one's orders were resdiscrepanized, for no one's orders were res-proceed by the mass, and the chiefs of sta-tions also getting discouraged from such a state of affairs, many of them had gone home. This was a sad state of affairs, but no station was in danger of attack. Six months have brought wonders. The natives, after comparison, have begun to learn who their best friend is, and my short Isary who their best friend is, and my short is them favorably toward me than my three years' work of patient and just dealing. All shough the line I received an ovation, and each district testified its joy quite character istically. It would be unbecoming in me to dilate on this. Since I have arrived carriers have appeared by hundreds, and the question of transportation has lost its importance; that is, I am no longer anxious about the future. Our stations can be supplied easily with native help, though I once doubted that natives here would ever appeared in the Congo last December I have been up as far as the equator, and have established two more stations, besides discovering another lake, Matumba, and exploring for one hundred miles or the table the triver known on my map.

Two incidents which occurred will keep my memory green for some time. A populous district was divided against itself, and there was nothing but war, throat cutting, carrying off of women, and nuch other strocious evil. One of the chiefs in more prosperous times had visited one of my stations below, and we had pur-chased a fine, large cance from him, which we had with us. He recognized it as we have re sailing past, and called out. We went ashore and made up our minds to halt and huy provisions. It was then I learned that the chief was at war with his former friends, and among the names of the chiefs that he mentioned was one who had pledged bro-therbood with one of my subordinates.
