Rannie, the Binghamton centre-forward, played a rattling game and had good support. The return match will be played next Saturday.

A FARCICAL GAME. TO THE ARGONAUT FOUR. How Baseball is Sometimes Played over

About 800 braved the elements Saturday afternoon in anticipation of seeing two games over the Don. The rain made a late start necessary, and two games were out of the question. Rain came down again in the first of the fourth, and it looked as if there would be no contest. After half an hour, when Lake and Casey had left the grounds, it was agreed to play; so Dixon of Providence caught for Toronto, and was of material aid to the champions. The play was farcical, and the spectators hissed both teams, as they deserved. Score:

The Charm of Grouse-Shooting. What, then, is the charm of grouse shooting over dogs on a mountain or moor where there is plenty of cover? There is, first, the charm of watching the working of the dogs, the intellimakes skilled canine co-operation so fascinating to a lover of animals, as every sportsman must be. Then there is the pleasure of using one's knowledge of the habits of birds of the grounds they will frequent, deep heathof the August day, short heather, on or in the evening; of using one's knowledge of the moor in order that the ground may be so worked as to force the birds from all directions into strong holding cover, where they will be likely to lie well; the pleasure, in

Then there is the walking which soon gets into hard condition the man who shoots over dogs and perseveres resolutely when, for the first two or three days, he feels the weakening effects of the sedentary life of the towns. It is only by the sportsman who does the necessary hard walking that the exspine, weak and flabby muscles, desire to sleep, failure to be reated by sleep, constipation, dulness of hearing, loss of voice, desire for solitude excitability of temper, sunken eyes, surrounded with LEADEN CIRCLES, ally looking skin atta are all symposium of the state of the spine of the state of the hilarating effects of the mountain air are felt in full. This exhilaration has been compared to that of champagne. but it is more like the new sense of the mere joy of living that comes from a plunge in the sea after a long hot walk when one comes out light, alert, vigorous, and feeling as though by some magic the theress activity of oily looking skin, etc., are all symptoms of nervous debility that lead to insanity unless cured. The spring of vital force having lostits tension every youth has been regained. The result of function wanes in consequence. Those who through abuse committed in iga few days' hard mountain walking after grouse is felt not only in lungs norance may be permanently cured.
