

In short a law-suit was commenced, and the most learned advocates in France were employed; a redundancy of erudition was displayed, and after being litigated for a length of time, a solemn decision was made in favor of the former husband.

The story has much the air of fable and romance, that to leave an impression of its truth on the minds of our readers, it is necessary to inform them that the French lawyers have selected all the famous trials with the decisions that have been given in their courts for a series of years.

This work which is contained in several folio volumes, is entitled "Les Causes Celebres." The above very extraordinary relation is recited therein, together with all the subtle and ingenious arguments used by the opposite advocates for the different husbands. No there can be but little doubt of the truth of the narrative so expressly and well authenticated.

A Notorious Scamp was brought not long since before an Oudonada Justice of the Peace, charged with the high misdemeanor of gambling. He was accused of having "come the strap-games" over a native. The portly Justice, wishing to decide understandingly, requested the culprit to give him a sample of his skill. "The party" instantly produced a leather strap, gave it a scientific whisk across the bench, and remarked:

"You see, Judge, the quarter under the strap!"

"What!" interrupted the dignified functionary, "do you mean to say that there is a quarter there?"

"Sartin!" was the reply, "No such thing," said the Justice, "I'll go you a dollar on it," said the prisoner.

"Agreed!" exclaimed "the Bench."

With accustomed adroitness the strap was withdrawn, when lo! there was the quarter!

"Well," said the astonished "Shallow," "I wouldn't be believed if I hadn't seen it with my own eyes! There is your dollar; and you are fined five dollars for gambling, contrary to the statute in such case made and provided!"

The elongated countenance of the discomfited gambler required no additional evidence to testify his appreciation of "the sack."

TOO MUCH ANXIETY.

Of the causes of disease, anxiety of mind is one of the most frequent and important. When we walk the streets of large commercial towns, we can scarcely fail to remark the hurried gait and careworn features of the well-dressed passengers. Some young men, indeed, we may see with countenances possessing natural cheerfulness and color, but these appearances rarely survive the age of early manhood. Currier closes an eloquent description of animal existence and change with the conclusion that "life is a state of force." What he would urge in a physical view, we may more strongly urge in a moral. Civilization has changed our character of mind as well as of body. We live in a state of functional excitement; because it is partial, irregular, and excessive. Our muscles waste for want of action; our nervous system is worn out by excess of action. Vital energy is drawn from the operations for which nature designed it, and devoted to operations which it never contemplated. [Thackeray]

Railway Travelling and its Effects on the Human System.—The very important question of the medicinal effect of travelling by railway has lately engaged the attention of the most eminent physicians, and it is some satisfaction to know that those who are said proverbially to disagree are at least in this respect unanimous. Even to the passengers of the third class, exposed to all the elements, railway travelling has been pronounced to be the harbinger of health and the greatest opponent to disease. Dr. James Johnson, no mean authority in these matters, has written in glowing terms of the advantages derived: "It is a dead calm, we cleave through the air as though we were running against a brisk gale—and if the breeze be adverse, we are sailing right in the wind's eye against a furious hurricane. This is the way to undergo a thorough ventilation—a salutary purification from the mephitic atmosphere of London, impregnated with all the poisons issuing from Pandora's box. It is in the 'main top' of a flying train like this that we can most effectually take pratique from a London lezzaretto, and disengage from our person and clothes those noxious vapours that have emanated from at least one hundred millions of living things; besides the incalculable masses of dead animal and vegetable matter in the transit of decomposition from a solid to a gaseous form of existence. Rather strong language this; but the assertions are confirmed by every-day experience. He further adds, that the oscillatory motion of the railway carriage is not only more salutary than the swinging, jolting, motion of a stage-coach, but that "it bids fair to be a powerful remedial agent in many ailments to which the metropolitan and civic inhabitants are subject, and that to thousands of valudinarians a railway ride of twenty miles would prove a means of preserving health and prolonging life more powerful and efficient than all the drugs in Apollinaris' Hall."

Others speak in similarly glowing terms of its effects in equipping the circulation, tranquillizing the nerves, and causing a sound, healthy, and invigorating sleep during the succeeding night. Caution, therefore, that apart from its physical benefits, the salutary influence exercised over the mind by change of scene and air, most material tends to make railway rambles a pleasurable source of health and recreation during the coming months of summer, we shall from time to time indicate some of the most alluring spots that fall within a day's trip from town, and by so doing hope to materially enlarge the stock of innocent pleasures to which our little "Miscellany" aims especially at contributing.—Travellers' Miscellany.

Mr. Cobden was presented to the Pope, at Rome, on the 22d ult., by the British Consul, and O'Connell was daily expected there. Both are to receive the decoration of a new order of merit, instituted by the Pope for rewarding persons distinguished for virtue or merit, without regard to creed or nation. It is divided into two classes, one of which confers on the members hereditary nobility and the other personal nobility.

Ampudia was in the battle of Cerro Gordo, but neither he nor S. Anna, Anna ventured within the life which their countrymen strenuously defended. They were prepared to run the moment the day should seem to reward them, and run they did. Anna came near being taken, close to Jalapa and to save himself had to take to the fields.

I had almost forgotten to state that she was given up by the Faculty as incurable, and she seemed to get up in the morning it was impossible to discover a tumor in her face, legs, in such a fearful state. This cure is entirely the use of your medicine.

I am, Sir, yours, &c. &c. (Signed) THOMAS TAYLOR.
