

open, though I hope if our men prove successful in these first appointments that in time the Indian Civil Service will be available.

The Colonial Office would not bear the expense of a man going to England, or of his return to Canada if he were not chosen, though I think his return would be most unlikely if the Committee here recommended him. He would not be under their pay until he passed the examination, and just what the pay would be I am not in a position to state.

The sort of men they would like to get are Engineers, Doctors and those who have had experience in administration. This would mean that graduates of Medicine, Science and Commerce might expect a fair chance at being chosen.

Colonial Service is quite attractive, in as much as it offers travel, very often a position of responsibility, and quite a long holiday every three years.

I think, if you would approach Sir Robert Falconer at the University of Toronto he would give you the opportunity of reading a goodly mass of memoranda which has been sent to us from the Colonial Office. The trouble is, that having only one copy I am unable to send it to you.

Yours faithfully,

Principal.
