

HUMOROUS BOOKS.

"TOO FUNNY FOR ANYTHING!"

JOLLY TITBITS FOR MIRTHFUL MORTALS.

"Josh Billings, Bret Harte, and Mark Twain rolled into one."

It is not too much to say that this book contains the choicest humor in the English language. Its size is mammoth, containing more than one thousand of the raciest jests, comical hits, exhilarating stories, showers of wit, exuberating jokes, uproarious poems, reflecting songs, laughable sketches, darkly comicalities, slow's efforts, button-bursting comedrama, endmen's jokes, plantation humor, funny caricatures, highfalutin' dialogues, curious scenes, kate sayings, judicious drolleries, and peculiar repartees. In fact, it is a complete "Joe Miller" and "Tom Sowa" in one volume. All the great comic stars refer to it, because they find in it something to "touch the funny-bone" every time. It contains an immense collection of Irish bulls, Dutch comicalities, and Yankee yarns, affording fun for a lifetime. Illustrated by lots of "komikal kuts." Price 50 cts. By mail 5 cts. extra.

BURDETTE'S BOOK OF COMIC PARODIES.

Being close imitations, in form and style of meter and language, of many of the most popular pieces by the leading poets of America and England.

Among the pieces parodied in this book are "Betsey and I have Busted Up," "Schlosser's Ride," "Der Mule Shteed on Der Steamboat Deck," "Dascher on der Rhine," "Der Goot Lookin' Snow," and numerous others, all of a highly amusing character, and particularly suitable for recitations.

The book is full of uproarious fun. Nearly every "highfalutin'" piece that "drowns the pit in tears" when recited in a deep, hoarse, tragic style, is so skillfully parodied (by first-class writers) in this capital book, that the reader hardly knows whether to laugh or cry,—but generally ends his dilemma by breaking into a horse-laugh. There is not a dull piece in the whole book. The author seems to have ransacked all comic literature for the best things of the kind extant. There are many pieces in this book immensely popular, but hard to find when wanted. Price 50 cts. By mail 5 cts. extra.

MORSELS OF MIRTH FOR FUNNY FELLOWS.

"Fun for evermore, and one day longer."

Crazz jam full of kurios, kweer, and komikal kuts and kantankerous katerwaulings. The quintessence of all the jocular jokes, witty sayings, mirthful dialogues, jolly promptings, and quistical comedrasms ever spoken, read, thought, or written. Price 10 cts. By mail 5 cts. extra.

DARKY SERMONS, HUMOROUS LECTURES, AND BURLESQUE ORATIONS.

There are enough of darky dialogues, nigger lectures, and funny-men's fassces in this book to start a dozen companies of minstrel shows. Many of the pieces are original, and all first-class. End-men could never end spinning of side-splitting jokes with these pages to study from. Getting up an amateur Ethiopian entertainment by aid of this complete work will be easy as "roading off a log." Price 20 cents. By mail 5 cents extra.

HAWTHORNE'S IRISH DIALECT RECITER.

Containing a collection of the most popular Irish Stories, Poetical and Prose Recitations, Humorous Letters, Irish Witticisms, and Funny Recitals in the Irish dialect.

This is the cream of Irish buttermilk. We feel cow'd at making such a bull, but one can't talk seriously when looking at the rich placer of the best Irish stories, speeches, bulls, and anecdotes ever gathered together. It is steeped with the porsen of real old Irish fun and drollery. It would make a man laugh at his mother-in-law's wake. Price 30 cents. By mail 5 cents extra.

BETSY JANE WARD (Better ½ 2 Artemus.)

Her Book of JOAKS, with a hull akount of her Kortship and Maridge to Artemus, with Pikturs drawd by Mrs. B. J. Ward.

Betsy was inspired with the comical showman's own spirit of fun, apparently by laying her night cap beside the head of Artemus; for every page is so full of satiric humor that it would seem as if the book was fresh from the brain of the illustrious showman himself. Betsy shows in her preface how aptly she was. She told Artemus that she "shood ware a Bloesmer, and ride astraddle of homes," although he said she "would look like a straddlebug."

Well printed, and bound in illuminated cover, with eight full-page characteristic engravings. Nearly 300 large 12mo pages. Price 50 cents. By mail 5 cents extra.

BOOK OF COMIC SONGS AND RECITATIONS.

The most complete assortment of comic songs, jocular poems, mirth-provoking pieces, and exuberating melodies ever issued. Price 10 cents. By mail 5 cents extra.
