had been given to understand.
When he took stock in the company he believed it owned the selling rights of the patents. He afterwards found out that the Toronto Roller Bearing Co. owned these rights. The Henderson Bros, made statements to him that the liabilities of the firm were only $14,000, besides $8000 owed R. I. Henderson. They also produced accounts which they said were good and worth which they said were good and worth

Immediately after his appointment he found that accounts owing in November were $30.976, and suits against the company for $12,810.89. On these the company acknowledged a liability of $2810.89. The accounts of $12,000, supposed to be good, were reported to be worth about 25 cents on the dollar.

The president accounts for the closing down of the factory by the fact that there were no orders for goods, and there was a large stock on hand. The statement he handed over to the Ontario Bank was made in good faith. Immediately after his appointment he
