Labor Leaders Commend the Mayor's Action.

His Worship Interviewed by a Deputation. The Sewerage Contract Explained

Citizens to Be Employed.

A deputation representing the labor interests of the city waited upon Mayor Little at his office at noon today to discuss the sewerage work from the laborers' standpoint. After the mayor explained his course in reference to the recent contract, the deputation expressed approval of his action and satisfaction at the

The committee comprised Joseph T. Marks, secretary of the Trades and Labor Council; Frank Plant, president of the Trades and Labor Council; W. Burleigh, secretary of the Bricklayers' Laborers' Union: R. A. Schreiber, secretary of the Cigarmakers' Union, and Samuel Wilson, secretary of the Shoe-makers' Union. Mr. Marks said the workingmen were exercised over the ten-hour question. In Toronto the rate of wages on such work as sewerage was 18 cents an hour, and in Winnipeg a bylaw had recently raised it from 12 1-2 cents to ing members present: Messrs. T. R. 15 cents per hour. In London they bylaw, but they felt that the ten-hour regulation would detrimentally affect workingmen of the city.

"I have often expressed myself," he contract, which I had to cast, I understood that the motion was perfectly safe from the laborers' standpoint. I thought the bylaw which the council had passed would govern the motion, and if the contractor was not prepared to accept the bylaw's conditions, then he could not get the contract." The mayor also explained that the rejection of the motion would have thrown the work back for a considerable per- not wish the work thrown back for Revision of the City Voter's List in iod. > OUTSIDE COMPETITION. Mr. Burleigh asked if there was no way of limiting the contracts to London people, because outsiders brought their material with them. The mayor said they could not exclude outside competition, but in the sewerage work it was not likely that the contractor would bring the bricks from Toronto. The bricks for the carshops were brought here. It would be to my interests to prohibit outside competition in everything," said the mayor, jokingly. "If we could pass a bylaw to compel every merchant in London to buy drygoods from Robinson, Little & Co and other local wholesalers it would be a good thing for us." (Laughter.) The mayor thought that when it was provided that the employes should be citizens of London, it did not matter so much who made the profits of the job. Some of the tenderers were really outsiders using the name of Londoners. Mr. Burleigh said he knew that was the case. Speaking of the carshops, he said the local brickmakers raised their prices when tendering, but came down when Mr. Mills threatened to buy bricks elsewhere. The Mayor-You wouldn't blame the contractor for refusing to pay a good deal more for London bricks?

Mr. Burleigh—Certainly not.
MUST EMPLOY LONDONERS. The mayor read the portion of the H. Thompson, John A. Smith, Jos. sewerage specifications which provided Wallace, M. Lindsay, Mrs. Jane Dagg, that all laborers, bricklayers, masons, president, Mr. T. J. Murphy, in the chair. The bylaws received their second reading, and were referred to a committee for suggestions. Foremen or skilled mechanics who could not be obtained in London might be secured elsewhere, with the approval of the city engineer; so that no outsider could be employed unless with the city engineer's permission. In case the engineer became too friendly with contractors, another man could be appointed in his place to oversee the work. The mayor said the contract was therefore strongly guarded in the nterests of local labor.

Mr. Marks admitted it was satisfactory in that respect.

Mr. Plant said they did not want to place taxpayers in the hands of any combination to wring money out of them. If the city engineer did his duty, there could be no serious objection to the contract. Workingmen would like to see in future contracts of this kind provision made that the men
