Anybody's Race For Third Place Berth Yet

Montreal, Feb. 1—There is apparently no team in the National Hockey League capable of halting Ottawa's onward rush. The Senators have now brought their impressive record to 17 victories in 20 games, Montreal having beaten them once, and tied them once, while St. Pats have downed them once, the only five points lost by the capital city team this season. The Senators have here games this week, at Pittsburg, at home with Boston, and at Toronto. If they win all three, they will have clinched as play-off berth in the race for honors. Montreal plays Canadiens tomorrow at the Arena and then has a one week lay-off prior to meeting St. Pats next week at Toronto. The Maroons do not play at home again until one week from Saturday, when they will meet New York here. In those two weeks will likely be decided the second position at least. The Montreal team still has a strong hold on the berth. But in the last two games they slipped. There tion at least. The Montreal team still has a strong hold on the berth. MONTREAL, Feb. 1—The Montreal Maroons' defence crumpled before the dazzling team play of the Boston Bruins Saturday night, and when everything was over they stood 5 to 0 for the cellar team.

Boston seems to have a hypnotic influence over the Maroons. So far this season they, with Ottawa, are the only players who have been able to hold an edge over the Montrealers.

Leila Brooks, Toronto, who 35 won the women's championship at Saint John, fell in the 200 yard event after leading throughout and the race went to Lois Littlejohn, Chicago, with Ruth Muhlmeyer of the same city second, and Marguerite Snyder of Endicott, third. The time was 26 seconds. Weather permitting, the remain-der of the events will be skated today.

Along The Sport Trail

WHAT CAUSED THUNBERG'S DEFEAT? OUT OF 150 races in his career as a speed-skater in Europe, Clas Thumberg, Finland, won 145. Yet, he comes to this side of the water and in defence of his prized title here, he does not win a race. He managed to score 10 points, getting a third place in the two-mile

Of the seven senior events, the Finn figured in the finals of every one save the 440 yards. While he did not have to qualify for the twomile and five-mile finals, he did fight his way into the finals of the 220, the 880, and the three-quarter and always he was a factor to be

Yet, he was hopelessly out-distanced when our North American boys started to sprint toward the finish. We have been fed on the idea here that the Finns are a tireless bunch of athletes and that the way Thunberg trained was to put two carloads of cement on his back and skate 20 miles and then when he was tired add another carload and skate 20 more. There must be something wrong with all this training dope. Charlie Gorman spent most of the last few weeks before the big meet on trains between here and New York and Newburgh. Yet, he showed more condition than any man at the meet, barring none. Thunberg, we were told, trained faithfully for this meet, starting last summer in Finland. Before the day of the big meet, we asked a man who knows this game from A to Z what he thought of the Finn. His reply was that his wind was "none too good."

Can the Finn's overwhelming defeat be laid to lack of finishing power? Maybe it was too much condition and he went stale.

Or was it different conditions of skating? There are many who believe that the pack bothered the Finn and consequently he could not get going. Over in his own country, he is used to skating in a lane of his own, hugging the blocks all the way. Here, he was either forced to set the pace or lay back in the pack. We all had an idea that the Finn would grab the lead here at the start and set such a pace that when the time came to sprint on the final laps as our boys do, instead of sprinting, they'd be asking, "Where

That was another theory knocked galleywest, for the Finn set the pace in only one final event and that was the mile where he was left standing almost still in the last mad lap.

The Finn in that race had a good chance to get a big lead and hold it but the simple truth stands that our boys rode with him easily and left him in their wake when they wanted to. An impressive demonstration that the Finn was not in shape,

Had he been in shape he could have equalled their stuff easily. He showed on the second day of the meet a flash of brilliant form when he led Gorman over the tape in a three-quarter semi-final in the remarkably fast time of 2.03 and 1-5th-or just a shade slower than Joe Moore's record time.

Here was positive evidence that the Finn could make time when feeling right. Dumbells and boobs don't skate within a second of the world's record very often. Some say the Finn had no one to help him and that he should have had two other Finns to set the pace etc. When asked on the final day of the meet if he would come back again, Thunberg replied he would like to come back and get "his revenge and bring someone with me." Maybe that same thought was in his mind.

It must not be forgotten that Clas did not understand a word of our language and he was skating under conditions totally foreign to him. A comrade might have helped.

OR IS THE REASON just the simple fact that Clas is getting along and that Father Time and not changed conditions, climate and other reasons are doing the bad work? Mr. Thunberg is nearly 33 years. Mr. Gorman is barely past 26, O'Neill Farrell is about 20 while Willie Logan is just over 19. Is it just a case of youth being served? The speed-skating game today is a gruelling one. There is no harder test for an athlete in any line of endeavor.

Would you expect Charley Paddock or Eric Liddell to win a five mile race. To win even a mile race? Hardly, because they are sprinters,

Yet, we expect speed-skaters to show all-round efficiency from the 220 yards to the five-mile. Is there any harder or more exacting test? A skater's muscles must be accustomed to the short, snappy pull of the sprint and the long, easy stretch of the longer events. It is tearing, grinding work and soon brings its toll. Perhaps, the resiliency of youthful muscles was the real cause of Thunberg's defeat. Any reader who has any ideas to air on this subject should get busy and let's have them. It is interesting work.

Moncton Girls Beat Saint John Outfit, 1209 to 1155

CHEERED on by several hundred onlookers, a Moncton girl, Miss Weldon, set up what is believed to be a record in local bowling circles when by the close margin of 3 to 2. This was the only loss sustained this year by the Atlantics on their home ice and they are out to keep it down to that number in tonight's game.

The final league game of the season here is carded for Friday night of this week when Sussex plays here. It may or may not have bearing on the title, but whether it does or not, a big crowd should be on hand to see these old rivals in action. Exhibition games with outside teams probably will be arranged for February.

Weldon, set up what is believed to be a record in local bowling circles when the game Saturday night on the Imperial alleys between the ladies' teams representing Moncton and Saint.
