A reply was received yesterday from the deputy minister of marine saying that no difficulty in this direction was anticipated this winter.

NEW PHASE TO WOODS TRAGEDY

Relative of Man Killed Asks for Action.

Here Today to See Authorities, Alleging That One of Men Named by Coroner's Jury Had Been Heard to Threaten.

Containing that the shooting of his nephew, Halliburton Brown, near St. Martins on September 16, in mistake for a moose, was not accidental as decided upon by a coroner's jury last evening, Halliburton Brown, Sr., came to the city this morning and asked the county authorities to take some action in the matter. On account of the coroner's jury returning a verdict of accidental death, however, Warden T. H. Bullock and J. King Kelly, county secretary, decided that the matter should go to the attorney-general and referred Mr. Brown to him.

Mr. Brown said that one of the two had been heard to threaten to shoot any man who informed on him for hunting without a license and within prohibited hours. He also said that the same man was a member of a gang which inflicted a severe beating on young Brown last year, following a dispute regarding the relative speed of two automobiles. Premier Foster, asked regarding possible action by the provincial authorities in the matter, said today that he had so far heard nothing about the new phase in the tragedy. Should there be a possibility of any criminal features in it, however, action would be taken by the attorney-general's department. According to the verdict of the jury last night, the young lad came to his death on September 16 at or about 7.45 o'clock on a wood road about one and one-half miles north of Bayview post office by means of one of two bullets fired simultaneously from rifles in the hands of Gilechrist and Holland; that all parties involved were in the woods at an unlawful hour and without licenses, but that, apart from criminal carelessness, the tragedy was purely accidental. Gilechrist and Holland mistaking Halliburton Brown Clifford McDonough and Fred. Erick Ross for moose.

FINE FRUIT GROWN ON LONG REACH

The Times has received from the orchard of Abraham Day at Fairville a spray of plums that looks exactly like a cluster of great purple grapes. There are thirty-one plums in this cluster growing on one small branch, each plum touching its neighbors as grapes do. Mr. Day has three young trees bearing heavily this year, and plans to have many more. These three are the result of grafting shoots from a tree he bought upon the stems of others which were not doing well. His fine orchard of apples, the trees nearly all young, is yielding well this year, and he has a large area under strawberries for next season. He has one fine pear tree and will plant more.

The hillside along the western side of Long Reach are a natural fruit garden. Just above Public Landing George Day experimented with a grape vine, and this year it bore several clusters of fruit. Apples, plums and small fruits yield largely. A gentleman familiar with the fruit belt of British Columbia said to the Times that Long Reach was peculiarly adapted to fruit and that some of the finest pears in the Pacific province were grown where it was necessary to carry soil to the rocky hillside to enable them to take root. In orchards along the Reach apples are lying under the trees that would be a boon to people in the city, but because barrels and freight are so high they are not marketed.

Choice varieties of apples may be grown by grafting them on the wild apple tree, and Mr. Day said he had seen twenty-one varieties growing on a single tree. He had seen an apple shoot grafting on a bilberry, and the tree yielding both kinds of fruit. Both early and winter varieties are in his orchard. Most of it is still young, and the yield will therefore increase from year to year. There are many orchards along the Reach, and the possibilities in that line are great. It is surprising that greater advantage has not been taken of the opportunity of producing choice fruit so near the city.

THE VOTERS' LISTS.
Twenty-six addition and changes have been made in the voters' lists by His Honor Judge Armstrong up to the present and about half a dozen requests have been refused. Judge Armstrong said that those people in doubt as to their names being on the list should first apply at the sheriff's office and if their names do not appear there to make application to him. Sessions will be held in the county court chambers every day this week at 11 and 3 o'clock. The only evening session will take place tonight at 8 o'clock.
