He tells me where he likes the line,

He takes the strangest libert es-

But never takes his leave!

He reads my daily paper through

He scans the lyric (that I wrote)

And thinks it quite absurd;

He calmly smokes my last cigar,

And cool'y asks for more; He opens everything he sees

Except the entry door! He talks about his fragile health,

And tells me of the pains He suffered from a score of ills, Of which he ne'er complains: And how he struggled once with death

To keep the fiend at bay;

But never goes away!

On themes like those away he goes-

He tells me of the carping words

He thinks the writer did me wrong,

He'd like to run him through!

He says a thousand pleasant things-

Some shallow critic wrote,

And every precious paragraph

But never says "Adien!"

Disguise it as I may,

Whene'er he comes, that dread

I know that, like an autumn ra He'll last throughout the day

In vain I speak of urgent tasks

In vain I scowl and pout,

A frown is no extinguisher-

It does not put him out!

I mean to take the knocker off,

Or hint to John that I am gone To stay a month or more.

I do not tremble when I meet The stoutest of my foes;

A Husband in Troub

Last Tuesday night, as Mrs Stansbury was the animate bundle. Mrs Stansbury very quickly turned into the house, and by the light of a lamp she examined the billet. It was addressed to her husband. In a state of

"To JOE STANSBURY-SIR :- I send you little Tommy, whom you will please take good care of, and bring up right, so that it may turu out to be better than its daddy. Oh.

what a sly old rake you are? Who would think that such a staid, sober old spindle-shanks, could be such a tearing-down sinner?

Look at it—it is Joe Stansbury all over. You deceived me shamefully, letting on to be a widower; but now lo a father's part. Your broken-hearted NANCY.

P. S.—Don't let that sharp-nosed wife of yours see this letter. Gammon her with some kind of a story about matters and lently thrown open and Mrs S. yelled out angrily:

"Stansbury, you village, come up here—here's a mess for you."

The astonished Stansbury hastily washed his mouth and obeyed the summons in a hur-

"Don't you want to see Nancy—the dear broken-hearted Nancy?" cried Mrs S., when her guilty husband hobbed into the room. "Nancy—what Nancy the 12" cried the 22" old rogue, in feigned explexity.

"Why, Nancy the mother of Tommy that has been hung up at the door, Mr S. Oh, you look mighty muccent; but just read the letter, and they look in the basket. Don't foundling,—the vigorous movements aston-ishing everybody.

"Its full of the d—l already," said Mrs.

Stansbury. "That shows it's his; you'll soon see that it is like him in everything else."

At last, the swadding clothes being removed, out jumped the baby, which made its escape through the open door. It was a large tom cat.

The joke was played upon them by a michievous young lady who lived next door.

Tattling.

One of the greatest evils that ever befell one of the greatest evils that ever befell mankind—or rather womankind—is worst of all bad traits—tattling I A thing that benefits no one, but injures many. Were it not for the slanderous tongues of the tattling, newscarrying gossipers, what a vast deal of trouble would be spared to many sensitive and noble hearts. It has come to be a custom to a considerable extent where a few tom, to a considerable extent, where a few ladies have assembled together to sommence criticising their neighbors and acquaintances.

criticising their neighbors and acquaintances. First, the dress which, is either too cheep or too costly for their circumstances; the trainis not long enough, perhaps; or the dress is entirely too long, so much so that no woman of unquestionable character would be seen wearing such a thing! And so on, until the lady's whole wardrebe has been pulled to pieces and every article found fault with!

Then the actions of the individual come in next. She is either too fast or too backward; shameless, or brimming full of mock modesty. And so it goes—nothing good to be found, but everything bad—until the sub-ject of their conversation has been completely dissected, and then, if nothing else can be place.

It has been my misfortune to reside for some time in a neighborhood that, but that one thing, would be all that a peac-quiet loving citizen could desire. A is, we have among the female portio community not less than a dozen, professional tattlers. It has professional tattlers. It has been thabit with them that they could if they were no defaring the nation or reputation of some one who is them as the sun is above the earth.

The door of the kitchen staire

Who never, never goes!
