

In conclusion, the committee feel justified in congratulating the members on the efficiency of the Society and its sound pecuniary condition. It is now free from debt, and with care and prudence can be kept so. A well regulated system is observed in the transaction of its business, and the success of their applications for the Christmas distribution, warrants the Committee in thinking that the Society holds a high place in public estimation. There is no reason why the good fame of the Society should not be maintained, and it depends on the members alone whether its escutcheon be tarnished or not.
