RED MICHAEL AND THE TARIFF

Addressing the Open Forum in Toronto, Dr. Michael Clark, the redoubtable member for Red Deer, Alberta, made an onslaught on the Canadian tariff. Among other statements he said:

The cost of living had been sent up by the war, but to a man who wanted to get to the root of things it was not enough to say the war alone caused it. The war operated in this way, that it prevented trade along ordinary lines; it cut off supplies and lessened the amount of production in the world. A tariff had the same effect.

A tariff resulted in prices being raised to the consumer and in view of the probably serious condition of the country during the next two years, no government which refused to meet the situation by taking tax off foodstuffs should be allowed to retain power in this country.

Free trade meant liberty to buy and sell where the people liked; it meant an exchange of surplus products; but to keep the home market for home products bred sectionalism and raised the cost of living.

Dr. Clark represents the wholly agricultural riding of Red Deer. He was born in Britain and inherited the free trade doctrine. He believes that the trade policy which has been in vogue in his native land, should be adopted here. In recommending this, he overlooks the fact that Britain obtained its eminence in manufacturing under Protection and did not discard it until its industries were so well-established that it did not require to fear competition. Its strong position as a maritime nation enabled it to bring in cheaply the raw materials it does not possess and to pay for them in manufactured goods. Much of its trading has been with countries which manufactured very few articles for themselves. For their wheat, timber, cotton, sugar, and meats and the like it exchanged clothing, machinery, boots and shoes, prints and pottery, to mention only a few articles.

Canada is differently situated. Nature has endowed it not only with fertile prairies but with timber, minerals, fish, a salubrious climate, power potentialities and waterways. All the makings of a strong industrial and agricultural country. Given free trade, it would not find any wider markets for its grain. That which would result would be to sell manufacturing countries its timber, its ores and other raw materials and take their products in exchange. Ontario in earlier years and sold its pine to Michigan and its nickel ore to New Jersey, until it realised its folly.

Canada could have adopted free trade instead of protection in 1878 but it would have remained a backward country. It chose the wiser course and set out to develop as rapidly as possible its vast heritages of natural wealth. This development was of slow growth. The Canadian Year Book states that during the three-year period 1886-1888, the total value of articles made in Canada and ready for consumption was only $38,000,000. An average of slightly more than $12,000,000 per year. In 1918, the output of Canadian industries was $3,000,000,000.

Concurrently with this development, Canada's population has increased from four to more than 8,000,000. In 1888, the value of Canada's exports of grain, animals and farm products was $38,800,000. In 1917-18 these reached and exceeded $700,000,000.

Progress in farming and factory industry has gone hand in hand. Disregarding the heavy exports of the war years, it is authoritatively stated that in peacetime, the Canadian public consumes 85 per cent. of all the Canadian farmers produce.

Were our tariff removed, it would not increase the sales of farm products to Britain. It is obliged to import the surplus foodstuffs of Australia, India, Argentina and Russia, in order to sell them its manufactured goods. Labor in those four countries is also cheaper than in Canada and is a further attraction. Canadian farmers will be better off when Canada's population has grown to the point where it can more nearly consume all that they raise and produce.

Free trade would not only injure the farmer's home market, which will within a year or two resume its importance but it would jeopardise the industries of Canada and the artisan, the mercantile and the transportation interests dependent upon them.

The West, of which Dr. Clark is one representative in parliament, has during the war prospered exceedingly. Under a fixed price for wheat its grain-growers have greatly benefited. The trouble there seems to have arisen from their desire to see war prices continue after peace is declared. To illustrate: they observe that through an error in judgment, the United States government guaranteed a price of $2.26 per bushel for wheat until June 1920. Canada's wheat-price guarantee expires in August of 1919. When western grain-growers express a willingness to forego their protection on wheat they are actually after the American market and the American price of $2.26 for wheat. Some of them are also using political union with the United States for that portion of Canada lying west of the Great Lakes.

The inordinance of this proposal is that Western Canada would thereby tie itself to a country which has a higher tariff than the Dominion and which intends to increase its customs duties.

It is only human for the grain-growers to envy the higher price which American farmers will receive on the next crop, but their demand for a similarly guaranteed price in Canada does not square with Dr. Clark's contention at Toronto that the cost of food-stuffs should be decreased.

Further, Western grain-growers are, when they agitate for a free trade, wittingly or unwittingly attempting to evade their fair proportion of war taxation. Their arguments for free trade would receive greater consideration were they to declare their willingness to pay their shares of the national debt under a system of direct taxation. They not only want free implements, automobiles, cement and oil, but request that the burden of taxation be placed on inheritances, on other people's incomes and profits, and on idle land.

This is neither manly nor fair. Canada voluntarily assumed the risks and obligations entailed in its war efforts. It made heavy sacrifices of human life and treasure but its material gains were great and widespread. Then the right thing to do is for Canadians jointly to shoulder the load, each carrying a part commensurate to his strength.

The wage-earners of Canada were, during the war, admittedly called upon to pay heavy imposts for foodstuffs. These have never objected to the farmer getting a good price for his products but have and do object to the exactions of wholesalers and big middlemen. They would be delighted to see a system introduced whereby the grower and consumer would be brought into closer relationship, with the wholesaler eliminated. The farmer would then get more for his products and the consumer be able to buy them cheaper.

When men like Dr. Clark argue for free trade, it should be recalled that there are, in his riding, practically no factories. Were the lignites of his province being briquetted; were its flax being spun into linen; the mineral deposits of the Rockies and foothills being developed and the ores converted into merchantable products; were there several large potash factories in operation and chemical works in numerous localities, he would change his tune.

Ontario has had its free traders. There is Mr. German, of Welland, who favors free trade for all industries excepting those of his own riding and Mr. Guthrie, of Guelph, who departing from the views his father inculcated, is now a thoroughgoing Protectionist. It seems as though, in advocating free trade, Red Michael is bound by the small horizon of Red Deer.

GETTING THE FACTS STRAIGHT

In recording the passing of Mr. D. B. Detweiler, the Galt Reporter made the comment following:

He was best known as one of the pioneers of the Hydro power enterprise in Ontario, having been instrumental in calling the first meeting in this city (Galt) at which the Western Ontario Hydro Power Association was formed in 1902, which marked the beginning of the great scheme.

Since with the elapse of time and the growth the Hydro services, subsequent generations will desire to know to what men and what city the credit truly belongs of having initiated the movement, the Record is constrained to set the Galt Reporter right.

In saying that the first meeting was held Galt and that it marked the beginning of the great undertaking, it is wholly in error. The first meeting was held in the then town of Berlin on June 9, 1902. At this meeting were representatives from: Berlin, Waterloo, Toronto, Guelph, Preston, St. Jacobs and Bridgeport. It will be noticed that Galt was not represented at the first meeting.

A second conference was held here on June 30, 1902, and another on February 17, 1903, when the following resolution was adopted by a representative meeting, at which Galt was represented:

Therefore, be it resolved that we respectfully suggest to and urge upon the Government of the Province of Ontario the advisability of the Government building and operating as a Government work, lines for the transmission of electricity from Niagara Falls to the towns and cities of Ontario;

And that the municipalities here represented call upon their representatives in the Legislative Assembly of Ontario to urge upon the government to carry out this resolution.

One of a series of meetings was held at Galt, to form a Hydro Municipal Association, but the path had already been cut through the forest. The Galt meeting was a clearing up of the brushheaps.

The movement was initiated and launched in this city. While the movement could not have succeeded without the assistance of neighboring municipalities, yet the credit for sponsoring the thought of obtaining Niagara power; of setting the movement afoot and of interesting the municipalities of Western Ontario in the project, clearly belong to the late Mr. Detweiler and the light of this distinction is in turn reflected upon his home city from where the pioneer work was done.

The fact that Hydro power was officially turned on for the first time at this center, October 11, 1910, is proof that the Whitney government and Sir Adam Beck were convinced that the credit attaching to the initiatory work belonged to this city and not to Galt.

CANADA'S REVENUES 1918-1919

According to a statement issued by the Canadian Finance Department, Sir Thomas White in his budget speech will be able to announce a revenue for the year, considerably in excess of the estimate in the last budget. The revenue was estimated at $270,000,000 but according to the statement in question the amount received during the last year shows a total of $305,230,000 or some $35,000,000 in excess of the estimate. Of this revenue the greatest increase comes under the head of miscellaneous, practically all collected by way of direct taxation, such as income tax and war profits tax. As compared with the previous financial year the yield of miscellaneous revenue has practically doubled. In 1917-18 it was $34,400,000. In 1918-19 it was $68,184,000.

War expenditure during the year was $347,824,000, an increase of approximately $47,000,000 over the previous year. Out of the surplus or ordinary revenues over ordinary and capital expenditure (less war) about 25 per cent. of the war expenditure will be met, practically the same percentage as was available in the previous year, although the war expenditure has been $47,000,000 greater.

The figures for 1918-19 are: Ordinary revenue, $305,230,000; less ordinary expenditure, $196,073,805; capital expenditure less war, $16,899,809; surplus of revenue over ordinary and capital expenditure, less war, $92,257,194. Revenues from customs and excise are growing in like manner. During the year customs brought in $147,740,000, and excise $30,011,000. In the previous year the revenues were: Customs, $143,311,000; excise, $28,677,000.

The post office is the only revenue which shows a reduction. It decreased during the year by about $600,000. Ordinary expenditure was increased by approximately $54,000,000. Within the last 12 months the net debt of the Dominion has grown from $1,103,394,000 to $1,438,377,000.

EXTRACTS OF EXCHANGE

UNFREE AMERICA
Chicago Tribune.—A Frenchman might wear a straw hat in a snowstorm and no other Frenchman would bother about it. It would be assumed that he had reasons sufficient to him for his preference. It would be considered his own affair, a bit of the variety of life, and of no concern to anyone else.

In America it would be a nine days' wonder. Some would jeer and pelt. Others would call the police. Others would form a society for the prohibition of straw hat wearing in the winter months.

In French civilization there is profound respect for individuality. In America there is little or none. The French recognize that without a free play of personality life must lose its spontaneity, its grace, and color, and zest. In America, we incline more and more towards standardization and the rule of the majority in matters which should be left open to the individual. We already live under a tyranny of public opinion which manufactures hypocrisy and compels mediocrity. For originality, for idiosyncrasy and individuality, we have at bottom both fear and hatred. We have a sort of moral lynch law for everything that does not square with the average, and we punish the unusual with something like the blind ferocity of a savage tribe.

Feels Like Burden Has Been Lifted

Mrs. Clark Had Almost Given Up Hope When Tanlae Restored Her To Health.

"I feel like Tanlae has lifted a big burden off my shoulders," said Mrs. Mary E. Clark, of 24 Buttonwood Ave. Mt. Dennis, Ont. Canada, recently. "I had a severe attack of pneumonia," she continued, "that left me in a terribly run-down state. I lost my appetite and fell off so much and lost so much strength that I wanted to sit down and rest all the time. My nerves were in such a bad fix that I hardly closed my eyes at all, and would get up in the morning feeling worse than when I went to bed. Often my head ached all day long. I could hardly get through my housework, and was afraid I would have to give up altogether. Before I had finished half my first bottle of Tanlae my appetite improved, and I haven't had a headache since I started on it. I sleep like a baby and am so much stronger than I was that I am actually doing every bit of my housework, and don't get tired in the least."

Tanlae is sold in Kitchener by E. O. Ritz & Co., in Galt by R. W. Meikleham, in Hespeler by Jno. R. Phin, in New Hamburg by W. H. Bouley, in Milbank by R. B. Hamilton, in West Montrose by A. E. Richert & Co., in Preston by H. L. Frick, in Waterloo by A. B. Learn, in Doon by L. C. Bunk.

TO PROPERLY TREAT OBSTINATE WRINKLES

Particularly where wrinkles are long and deep, the massage devotee is apt to rub too hard and too frequently. This loosens the skin, causes muscles to sag and aggravates the condition. Just the opposite result from that sought.

Better than massage or anything else, for the most obstinate wrinkles as well as the finest lines, is a remarkable formula, which you may readily avail yourself of, as you will have no difficulty in procuring the constituent ingredients. It is this: One ounce powdered azotite, dissolved in one-half pint water. Bathe face, neck and hands in this. The effect is really marvelous, not only as to wrinkles, but also in cases of buggy cheeks and chin. The application is cooling and soothing, tending to relieve fatigue. Both the witch hazel and the azotite are, of course, entirely harmless to the skin.

SPRING TIME

Springtime when soft voices call, Not in vain, the slumbering hearts, Gently wooing one and all, Bidding them awake and start, Spring herself who bends so low, Softly each shy bud caressing, Till they rise to live and glow, Love and beauty thus expressing.
