

Chesterfield Gardens, Mayfair, and met many of my old comrades, among them Lieut.-Col. O. F. Brothers, O.B.E., of my old battalion, who had done such splendid work with the trench warfare department.

About three weeks after my arrival in England I received my embarkation papers to leave at once for Canada, and after thanking all those friends who had been doing so much for the prisoners of war in Germany, and those who had given me such a splendid reception on my return, I left Liverpool on September 24, 1918, for Canada.
