make them for button-holes?" Chamberlain asked.

"Oh, they're too expensive for that r, and, besides, my customers wouldn't care to set a new fashion like that."

Nothing more was said. Lord Beaconsfield had just died, and mention was generally made of his partiality for primroses. Sir George Birdwood wrote a letter to the "Times," suggesting a Primrose Day. Two or three days afterwards, the young assistant received an order from a sistant received an order from a gentleman for all the orchids in the shop-window-not to be removed.

"I will call and you can give me a fresh flower when I want it. I will take one now. Perhaps you will pin it on. Thank you. Good morning."
The gentleman was Joseph Chamberlain, M.P. Before the Easter prorogation of Parliament some orchids sent to Highbury, Birmingham, laid the foundations of his orchid-growing career. The girl in the florist's shop is now a successful London actress.

0 The Ways of Blair

There once was a statesman called

Who often went up in the air. He shunted and switched, As if quite bewitched, But now he's a Liberal for fair.

A Tribute to Canada

A great deal has been written lately about the attitude of the average English immigrant towards the land of his adoption. Recently an Englishman who has lived in Ontario for two years was praising his new home so highly that a friend asked in curiosity

"What is it about Canada that you like so much?"

"There's not much to be said for the climate," said the Englishman promptly, "But what I like about Canada is that a chap can look after his own furnace and still be considered a gentleman."

Gentle Gertrude

The London "Times" has lost its breath, In fact, it's shocked almost to death; For Mrs. Gertrude Atherton Who many slushy books has "done," Just told the Editor—ah, well! No wonder that her stories sell. 0

Exam. Humour

Only those who have read the answers which school-children pen are aware of how much absurdity is set down for sober fact. A recent article on "howlers" shows that many English youngsters are ingenious blunder-ers. One of them, answering the question: "What is the origin of the word cabal?" stated:

"The word cabal was invented as a short name for the English Prime Minister, because his name is so long. 'Ca' is short for Campbell, 'Ba' is short for Bannerman, and the last letter I, was added to show that he was the leader of the Liberal party."

The reply to the question, "Who is Tolstoy?" showed a valiant desire to show an acquaintance with current events.

"The leader of the Passive Resisters; he had his goods sold at auction sooner than be vaccinated."
