Double Parked

A long time ago, Henry Ford did a wonderful thing. He invented the automobile.

But Henry made one mistake. He forgot to invent a place to put it.

And so Henry and his fascinating flivvers have had their parking troubles ever since. After finally displacing Ol' Nel and Dobbin from the barn they then had to move them out of their places in front of the hitching posts on main street. Then suddenly there wasn't enough room in front of the hitching posts any more. So somebody parked in the vacant lot across the street. Then everybody parked in the vacant lot across the street. And so it went as the deluge from Detroit continued.

And so it still goes.

A classic study in the critical present-day parking situation exists on this campus. Here, student car-owners have the choice of parking in the gymnasium car-lot, (and the subsequent walk up the hill from that point quickly makes one question the advantage of owning a car at all), or secondly, if one is prepared to brave the sea of mud which swishes about the two parking lots at the rear of the Chemistry Building, he may commute to classes from that point, arriving at lectures probably looking more like a camouflaged paratrooper than a student.

There are 155 student automobiles registered at the university. There are probably another 100 not registered. However, the three student parking lots offer parking facilities for 300 automobiles. So it appears that the problem is not so much one of adequate space but rather one of location of this space.

The solution? Well, there just doesn't seem to be one. Apparently student car-owners will just have to grin, bear it, and hope that the rain on the plain stays mainly in Spain.

Frats Frightened; "Discrimination" Claims UT Co-ed

Toronto (CUP)—Fraternities on the University of Toronto campus are running scared this week following charges by a negro student that she was discriminated against when she tried to join a Sorority.

Twenty-one-year-old Barbara Arrington said presidents of two of the women's sororities took her for a "walk around the block" and told her no one would bid for her if she tried to join.

Before this, both Sororities, Kappa Kappa Gamma and Delta Gamma, had publicly expressed interest in having Barbara in their chapters. The executive members of the two sororities made it clear there were no discriminatory clauses in their constitutions.

On the morning of the first of a series of teas, held to allow the sororities and prospective members to look each other over, Mary Jose Bakker, President of Kappa Kappa Gamma, took Barbara for a little walk.

The conversation that took place was rather confused. Mary Jose said she wanted to save Barbara any possible "embarrassment" and told her if she continued rushing she would not be bid for by any sorority.

One reason given Barbara was that she had not been recommended by a member of the Sorority Chapter in her home town, New York City. Barbara said the card she was asked to fill out did not request such a recommendation.

Upset by these developments, Barbara did not attend the teas, but went to the Varsity college paper and told her story.

The Varsity advised her to continue rushing, and Barbara did her best. She met Helen O'Rourke, President of Delta Gamma. Helen told her she had missed the teas and was ineligible for membership.

The Varsity intended to print Barbara's story Friday, Oct. 9. The Women's Inter-Sorority Group, Panhellenic, asked the paper to wait until they had a meeting. A representative of the Panhellenic, Mari Snyder, said the Panhellenic would issue a statement. The Varsity withheld publication for four days. No statement was issued, other than "no comment".

THE HOTBED

The wonder of all wonders has happened. Finally the SRC has had a business-like, productive and worthwhile meeting. The occasion was the preliminary budget meeting and under the close surveillance of the industrious and sharp-eyed treasurer, Ed Daughney, all campus groups were forced, for once in their lives, to toe the mark and present decent budgets. Possibly the SRC is becoming more than just a lazy group that does nothing but collect the students' money and then pass it out to any organization that cries on its soft shoulder.

Probably the SRC's most brilliant move was the passing of the following motion—"Moved that, providing campus organizations do not have reasonable excuses for not attending the preliminary budget meeting, budgets be cancelled on the recommendation of the Finance Committee". This was a well deserved belly punch at the Inter-Varsity Christian Fellowship and the Student Christian Movement. Neither of these organizations had the courtesy, the energy or the interest in their organization to appear and explain their requests. They expected, as they have in past years, that the soft-hearted SRC would pass their exorbitant budgets without question.

They are in for the biggest surprise of their rather drab lives.

Suppose for a minute that members of the IVCF are interested in their organization. Let us suppose that a person interested would at least possess his own hymn book. Why have they the nerve then to ask for $25 in their budget for the purchase of such hymn books? This is one of the questions that they may have been able to answer had they awakened from their years of hibernation.

Has the SCM, who asked for $300, done anything to justify this request? Have they given any good examples of energetic, or even competent leadership? Have they even shown that they are particularly interested in their own organization? The SCM seems to do little but shed crocodile tears as they ask for money from big generous brother, SRC, on bended knee. Why can't this organization help themselves a little bit before they expect help? There are many concessions that they could operate that would earn some money. For instance, the concession at the football games has been taken over by a downtown restaurant. Why didn't SCM apply for this?

There is one big question that remains. Will the SRC step heavily on the toes of these organizations as it has promised or is this just a ghost motion that will lie dormant? If they do nothing and it is just a colossal bluff, then the members are the worst type of phoney publicity seekers. A decision to throw out the budgets of SCM and IVCF might well be an unpopular one, but the purpose of the SRC is not to win popularity contests. It is to give honest, solid student government. They have taken a step in the right direction.

It will be interesting tomorrow night to see whether they will cringe from their responsibilities, or whether they will stand up to all the groups on campus and do an honest job.

LAW BALL FRIDAY NIGHT

This Friday night at the Lord Beaverbrook Hotel UNB's prospective lawyers will hold their annual Law School Ball. Music will be played by Robin Roberts and his Top Hats and dancing will begin at 9. Dress is semi-formal but this seeming casualness does not permit males to come garbed in sports attire!

The Law School points out that any UNB student may attend their Ball. Tickets may be bought from any law student or at the door.
