

yearly instalments, or by lease for twelve years, paying a yearly rent; and when the instalments in the one case, or yearly rents in the other, are paid, a free deed is granted. The Company, indeed, have given longer time than the period specified to pay instalments, they charging only 6 per cent. interest; and there is no instance here which I recollect of where they have acted harshly, or otherwise than shewing much favour to the settlers in the paying of their lands.

To conclude, I may add that my relations, John Gibb and his son George, and my brother-in-law, William Dunn, are all doing well; and they can also bear evidence, in their own success, to my statement; shewing that there is, generally speaking, a decided advantage in emigrating to this country.

(Signed)

GEORGE WOOD.

I
of N
coun
merc
in. t
cons
My
his town
Wo
plac
V
mile
Wo
sum
at l
fou
lan
In 5
acr