

IX. To prevent disappointment, when books are sent for, subscribers are requested to make out a list of several numbers from the Catalogue, of such books as they wish to read.

X. No books to be changed on Sundays.

XI. Strangers will be expected to deposit the value of such books as they may take, if required.

XII. Attendance will be given every day, (Sunday excepted,) at the Library, from eight in the morning to seven at night.

THE PROPRIETORS OF THE LIBRARY beg to offer their best thanks for the past support given to the undertaking. The difficulty of obtaining and keeping up a collection of books, in this country, must be obvious to all:—they therefore respectfully request that the readers will be punctual in the return of books, and that they will not require more at a time, than the number allotted. They feel it necessary to adhere strictly to the conditions of the Library, as being the only means of rendering justice to all the readers indiscriminately.
