

FACULTY OF MEDICINE.

The Principal (ex-officio.)

Professors,—HOLMES.

CAMPBELL.

HALL.

FRASER.

SUTHERLAND.

SCOTT.

WRIGHT.

HOWARD.

M'CALLUM.

Demonstrator and }
Curator of Museum. } CRAIK.

Dean of the Faculty,—A. F. HOLMES, M.D., LL.D.

The Annual Course of Lectures in the Medical Department of McGill College for the approaching Session of 1859-60, is appointed to commence on the first Monday (7th) of November, and to be continued throughout the winter to the end of April.

The Faculty of Medicine are happy to be able to report the continued and increasing success of their School during the last Session, manifested by a larger attendance of pupils than has ever before occurred. The inscriptions (which are annual) in the Matriculation Register of the Faculty, amounted to ninety-seven. The number of Graduates is also largely above the average of former years. The degree of Doctor of Medicine and Surgery was conferred at the last Convocation on 22 pupils, most of whom had commenced and completed their Medical education at McGill College.

The well-known character of this School renders it unnecessary to enter largely into the advantages which it offers to Students for obtaining a thorough knowledge of their profession,—as evidence of which the Faculty can point with great satisfaction to many of their former pupils holding distinguished situations in different parts of the world. Only a brief notice need, therefore, be given of the mode of instruction and the means at the disposal of the Faculty.

COURSE OF STUDY.

The number of Professors in the Faculty is Nine; the number of Classes Ten; two of the Classes (often conjoined in European Schools) being held by one Professor.

ANATOMY.—(Prof. Scott)—The fresh subject is chiefly employed in the illustration of the Lectures in this branch, aided however, by dried preparations, wax models, plates full size of life, &c. The Dissecting