

ADDRESS AND PRESENTATION

Mr. and Mrs. Earl Vanderwater, 3rd of Sidney, Remembered by Their Friends Prior to Removal.

The home of Mr. and Mrs. Earl Vanderwater, 3rd of Sidney, was invaded on Thursday evening, Feb. 22nd, by a surprise party numbering about fifty-five guests. Mr. Edgar Adams acted as chairman, and after a few friendly speeches, Miss Stuart was called on to read an address, and Mrs. Roy Hhrasher presented Mrs. Davis and Mrs. Vanderwater with beautiful leather handbags, and Mrs. Dave Thrasher, a club-bag to Mr. Vanderwater. Lunch was served at the close and the party broke up with singing "For they are jolly good fellows." Following is the address:

Mr. and Mrs. Vanderwater, Mrs. Davis, Dear Friends:—

We are gathered here with you in your home to spend a last social evening, an evening, the pleasure of which is marred only by the knowledge that you are so soon to leave our midst.

As the time for your departure draws near, we realize more keenly the loss which our community must suffer on your removal from it. But rather than dwell on our sorrow, we feel that we should rejoice in the gain of those to whom you are going.

Mr. and Mrs. Vanderwater, several years have passed since you came first to live among us. You have stood the test of time; and as each year went by, we learned to love you for your own true worth. This word can best be expressed in the words of Moore, who wrote:

"You live for those who love you, For those who know you true, For the heaven that smiles above you,

And awaits your spirits, too; For the cause that lacks assistance, For the wrongs that need resistance,

And the good that you can do." Just how much we shall miss you in all the circles of our community, your absence shall tell. Your untiring efforts in regard to our social and moral interests have proved and shown to us both your efficiency and your willingness of spirit.

Mr. Vanderwater, how strange this neighborhood will seem without you here with us! The greater number of have known you since your very early years. We have been school-mates together, and the memory of many of the incidents of those days will always remain fresh. Then when school days were over, and we were jolly young people together, you were always one brave in attempts to make those years the merriest. Since that time too, if we could stop to count the many ways in which you have rendered service to us, each and all, we would find that we owe to you an acknowledgement of appreciation for these courtesies. We all earnestly hope that in your new home in that great "golden west" to which you are going, you will find every possible happiness, and that in the midst of your surroundings and friends, your influence will be felt as it has been here.

As a slight token of our sincere friendship and of our esteem, we ask you to accept these gifts, together with our hearty good wishes for a bright and prosperous future.

The wedding took place in the Third Ave. Methodist church, Saskatoon, on the 12th of Feb., of Miss Blanche Smith of that town, youngest daughter of Mr. W. J. Smith, St. Thomas, to Mr. Wm. D. She wore a black picture hat and a seal skin coat with ermine trimmings. After a short honeymoon to Vancouver and other western points, the young couple will reside near Oyen, Alta. Previous to Mrs. Lewis' marriage she was the superintendent of the Kinderly United Hospital, Kinderly, Sask.

The friends of the groom in Havelock and vicinity extend hearty congratulations.—Havelock Standard.

The groom is a brother of Mrs. W. B. Simonds of Rossmore.

ENTERTAINED AT KHAKI CLUB

Yesterday afternoon Mayor Ketcheson and Mr. A. R. Symons met some returned soldiers of Peterborough, Thursday at the G.T.R. depot, who

EVERY MALE IN CANADA SHOULD BE CALLED OUT

Under Militia Act General Hughes, Former Minister of Militia—788,000 Single Canadians Have not yet Enrolled—Theater was Packed and Hundreds Turned Away.

"Every male in Canada should be called out and be ready to defend his home and loved ones. It would not be necessary to order them overseas. Once they got into training, they would spring to the colors and ask to be sent to France."

"There are yet 788,000 single Canadians of military age who have not yet enrolled."

"Call out the boys from every part of Canada under the Militia Act, train them and after a month of training you will see that it will not be necessary to use compulsion for overseas service."

"I maintain we are not now utilizing two-thirds perhaps not one half of the man labor in Canada. The Province of Ontario could produce eight times as much as it does. We are taking the world easy."

These were some of the remarks made by Lieut.-Gen. Sir Sam Hughes at Griffin's opera house on Sunday night when he addressed a monster gathering on behalf of the 254th battalion. The theater was packed long before 8.15 and hundreds upon hundreds of citizens were unable to obtain admittance. Young men were quite prominent in the audience. So great was the drawing power of the erstwhile Minister of Militia. Some significant pronouncement was expected from the General, but it was not forthcoming. He lashed the National Service idea, and its waste of time and money with out results.

The General is looked upon by many as a Belleville boy and reference was made to his early days in the town as a school teacher by Mr. E. Guss Porter, K.C., M.P., who acted as chairman. "This is preeminently a recruiting meeting," he said "to stimulate enlistment in Belleville and the adjoining district." The chairman referred to the food situation in Britain as outlined by Premier Lloyd George, who sounded a warning note—to produce and husband resources. Mr. Porter urged the citizens to keep this thought in mind.

"There is in our city a large amount of vacant land. If every man would do his best to produce this land, we should find that we had helped materially by the end of the season."

At the trumpet blast of war, thanks to Providence Canada had a man, a patriot and a soldier who made possible the building up of a great army. In introducing Gen. Hughes, Mr. Porter announced him as "the man who made it possible for Canada to become the admiration of the world."

Mr. J. W. Johnson, M.P., led in cheers for the General. Lieut. General Hughes recalled his first visit to Germany. He did not think the German soldier of 1910 was of the high type of the soldier of 25 years before. Everywhere one saw preparations for war against Belgium and France, whose armies were inadequate. When war broke out, he had thanks to this revelation, 100,000 well trained in Canada and had boys drilled. The Germans openly boasted that the Kiel Canal would double Germany's strength by adding naval to land power.

The first contingent was raised by were going to spend a few hours in Belleville while waiting for the evening train. They invited the returned warriors to the Khaki Club.

Among the visitors was John Fleming, a well known Belleville boy who went with the 59th and was badly wounded in the feet. He spent the time prior to the departure of the Midland train in visiting relatives in Belleville and then went on to Lindsay.

Seven of the soldiers travelled to the Khaki Club where the sergeants in charge and Mr. and Mrs. Symons entertained them. The boys told stories of their experiences and were altogether a happy lot. One of them was a man named Bagehay, of the 23rd Battalion of Belleville, and another, a youth named Aythart, of Campbellford, met his father here, who is in the 225th Battalion. A father accompanied his son home.

Before departing on the evening train, the soldiers were profuse in their praise of the entertainment, furnished them, and of the Khaki Club, the like of which they had not seen elsewhere.

The party had come up from Kingston, having landed at Quebec a few days ago.

235th AT BRIDGE STREET

The 235th Battalion attended divine service at Bridge St. Methodist church on Sunday morning. Rev. Dr. Scott preaching.

officers gathering men around them as by the appeal of the fiery cross in the olden days. The second method of recruiting was by district battalions. The next system was by county battalions, and battalions in towns and villages—the most perfect system ever devised in the world. "We raised fully 200,000 men in '15, and I have no hesitation in saying that I had not been interfered with." Recently the country was divided into areas of 100,000 population for recruiting purposes.

In the spring of 1915 an agitation was started to prevent enlistment for fear of robbing the land and the factories. The question was put like this to men—"Is it better to go to the front and be shot at for $1.10 per day or work in munition factories at $5.00 per day?"

General Hughes said he had not yet seen land unfilled or factories idle. Women can work at munitions given in Belleville scarcely a woman is employed at this work. "Here let me say I am an advocate of woman's rights, I could never see why women should not have the vote."

"All my life I was a believer in universal training." He had 20,000 boys trained but the war came on before they had grown up.

The male population of Canada between 18 and 45 was ten years ago 1,720,000. Already enrolled are 400,000, of which 300,000 are unmarried. There were at the outbreak of war, 1,058,000 single men eligible to fight. Fully 500,000 remain without counting exemptions.

"We are not to stand on a flimsy 500,000. The Empire is in danger. I maintain it is our bounden duty to roll up our sleeves and get behind the boys at the front with 150,000 reinforcements."

Gen. Hughes told of his demand for compulsory service, and later for the use of the Militia Act. The National Service idea was worthless. "You can't show me where it has produced a single volunteer."

Under the Military Act, men could be called out to the number of 400,000 or so and the training received would inspire them to go to France."

The General turned to the merits of the Canadians at the front.

"I cannot conceive how a young fellow of fighting age, a single man can remain at home. This war we hope and pray may turn out right. We are united to Germany by the very ocean we thought divided us. Let the British navy fall and von Hindenburg could land men in Canada and devastate the land."

Mayor Ketcheson in moving a resolution of thanks expressed his faith in the Militia Act. The time has come to train the men still in Canada. Judge Wills in seconding reiterated the same sentiment "Do not get the idea this war is ended. The foe is powerful. We have got to have every man going and then we shall win. You have got to start it now and show that you are men by turning out to drill."

The 254th band played a fine program of music. Among those on the platform were Sir Mackenzie Bowell, Col. Allen, J. W. Johnson, M.P., Ald. W. B. Deacon, and others.

RECOVERING FINELY

Mr. R. B. Morden, 21 9 George St. has received a letter from his son, Signaller Ralph Morden, who was wounded Nov. 10th last, while carrying out his work on the firing line in France. The letter conveys the gratifying assurance that he is now convalescent and able to move about with considerable freedom. Some time ago he was removed from the hospital at Dublin where he was first confined and was taken to the Ontario Government hospital at Orpington, Kent. Here he is receiving the kindest attention and has met a number of friends who are showing him many courtesies. His injury was a very large and serious flesh wound due to a shell fragment. He has turned a deaf ear to all offers to come to Canada to recuperate. He intends to stay where he is until fit to return to the front and see the game through.

Veteran Educationist and Author of School History of Canada Died in Toronto

Veteran educationist and author passed away in Toronto on Saturday in the death of Mr. J. Frith Jeffers of Belleville, formerly of Peterboro'. Mr. Jeffers was born at Belleville in 1842, the son of the late Rev. Wellington Jeffers, D.D. He was educated at the Toronto Model Grammar School and the University of Toronto. In early life he was a public school teacher; was appointed classical master at Peterboro' Collegiate Institute in 1876 and head master in 1881. Later he became president of the Belleville Business College. Afterwards he took up accounting, and for some years was chief auditor of the Midland Railway Co. of Canada during the Presidency of Hon. Geo. A. Cox. He was also identified with the Canada Life and other insurance companies for a time.

Mr. Jeffers was a veteran of the Fenian raid service of 1866. He was married twice, first to Adelaide Ketcheson of Belleville, who died in 1901, and second to Mrs. Turner of Belleville, who survives. Mr. Wellington Jeffers of Lindsay is a brother and Mrs. Jeffers Graham of Toronto a sister. Rev. J. W. Graham and Miss Jean Graham of Toronto are nephews and niece, respectively. Mr. Jeffers was the author of a popular school "History of Canada," published in 1876; of "Bookkeeping" (1905), and also, with J. L. Nichols, of "Canadian and American Citizenship" (1904).

LETTER FROM MISS E. J. GUEST

The following extracts are from a letter received by a Belleville lady from Miss E. J. Guest, written from The War Hospital, Duxton, Northampton, England, on the 28th of January, 1917:

"How I did enjoy the greetings and the card and the papers! How good glimpses of the 'Ontario' looked, with so many familiar names in its columns, and the Board of Education report!"

"We are encouraging and developing handicraft among our patients here; just began it before Christmas, and had our first exhibit about the time your letter arrived. Hon. Mrs. Fortescue, wife of Gen. Fortescue, gave the two first prizes so I thought 'here's the place for your Canadian dollar bill.' I knew you would be interested in furthering this work, so I offered my 'prize from Canada.'"

It is wonderful how interested the men are, and how eagerly they learn and work. Paintings, carved work, embroidery, drawing, woodwork, came in. It was touching to see one man with his right arm in a big, elevated, wooden sling above his bed, work away in a sampler. Another, with great pride, he showed the table centre piece, he was embroidering with silk. Another old bird caricatures of the medical staff—very good and very droll.

Another painted the flags of the Allies. The first prize winner was a beautiful water-color nature sketch. Here was one nice, bright-eyed little fellow, quite young, who told the matron (she is head of all the nurses) that he could not do anything. 'Surely you can do something to send in,' she persisted. 'No,' he replied, mournfully, 'you see I was a barber before the war, and now I'm not going to be able to go back to the trenches, and I don't know what I'm going to do.' His wounds affect him so that pus forms in his lungs, and he had been very ill and depressed. 'Now, see here,' she said, 'we'll put on a competition for the best cut of hair.' He brightened up, laughed, and said 'I'll try that.' So that is where your prize went. We bought a barber's scissors and comb with it; so he will have something to start with when he is discharged.

I write medical histories, and between times I am assistant visitor to the Australians; bringing cable-forms, small kits with toilet articles in them, warm woolen clothing etc., and looking after them generally. This week I have 164 to look after, for the colonel's daughter, my other half in this work, has gone to London with her sick mother. We have men from all over the Empire here, from milliohaires to day laborers,—from college men, to those who were never on the cars before the war. Of course I have a specially warm spot for the Canadians, and they for me, but I must not show partiality."

GIFT ACKNOWLEDGED

The following letter is an acknowledgement of the safe arrival of the second barrel of fruit sent to the soldiers overseas by the Young Women's Christian Temperance Union:

France, Jan. 5th, 1917.

Dear Miss Reeves:—

Although your jam did not get to the trenches, it came within halting distance, and that is near enough. We don't want to lose it; its just like mother makes. We got it on New Years day—a pretty good time. Although on Christmas we got plum pudding, and turkey with the usual stuff on New Years, but we celebrated with the jam and it was fine. This is my third New Year in the army, and the second in France.

We have had considerable heavy rains lately and strong winds to make matters worse, but I am getting quite used to the water now. The towns around here have been flooded. We took rations to them on pontoon bridges and there is about six inches of mud everywhere.

We have been having it rather easy lately, but expect to give Fritz the time of his life. I am living in the hopes of spending next New Years in the Land of the Maple. Well, I think I must close now, thanking you very much for your present. I hope you are having lots of skating etc.

With best wishes, I remain, Yours sincerely, Pte. N. S. Potter.

NORTHPORT

On Tuesday evening there was a Kitchen Shower for Mrs. Ford Howe nee Mary Maines. The event took place at Mr. Albert Rowe's residence Northport. The 254th Band gave a concert on Friday night in the Orange Hall, the proceeds going towards the Red Cross. Col. Allen and Lieut. Cook both delivered short and appropriate addresses. The entertainment which was excellent in character, was made up entirely by the members of the battalion.

Reference was made to an aged lady Mrs. Fleming, who had knitted 204 pairs of socks for soldiers, she is over 80 years of age. There was some speculation as to the number of miles of yarn used. No club of its size has sent more supplies overseas than the Red Cross of Northport. Mrs. B.F. Wilson is the president and is the mother of Lieut. Wilson, now at the front.
