All-round Man

Mr. Browning was well educated well trained, and the possessor of calm judicial temperment which well suited him for the office which he occupied, and helped him to discharge his duties with efficiency and universal satisfaction. He was persistent in his work, filled with a pride in the performance of his duties, and in every way and every sense thoroughly reliable and capable official. The members of the legal profession especially will feel their loss, and will agree that the vacancy created is one that can hardly b
