BY A FELLOW ARTIST

T is hard to describe Sir William Van Horne in fairly moderate language. One finds superlatives

Not that Sir William was what one would call a handsome man, though it was hard to judge what he may have been in his youth. But his extraordinary sympathy and understanding of all things beautiful from the effect of all natural scenes to the most exquisite of man-made objects.

I went first to see him in order to get his permission to make a sketch of him in black and white. I will admit I was just a little bit afraid that my errand would be fruitless for I was told Sir William was an "Empire

Builder," and the man more or less responsible for the great Canadian Pacific Railway. I felt for a moment that I was going to meet the man who laid the rails from the Pacific to the Atlantic-who operated the trans-

Pacific ships from Vancouver to the Orient, and the trans-Atlantic from the Maritime coast to the British Isles. It was a great joy when he came slowly into the big drawing-room with a genial smile and an apology on his lips for keeping me waiting—then I knew my request would be granted.

His first words were, "Now what can I do for you?" And on my stating my request, he immediately replied in the affirmative with none of the

"shilly-shallying" of lesser men who might wish to pretend that they are much too important to give up any time to such an unimportant person as an ambitious artist. He at once fixed a day and hour and it was with great delight that I started on the sketch in his own studio, a wonderful room full of curios and "objets d'arts" from all countries and of all ages. The inevitable cigar was in his mouth most of the time, but every now and again he would take it out and say, "You will tell me when I am to stop smoking, won't you? May I have another puff?" Being an artist he could understand how one felt and his chief idea was to make it as easy as possible for a

Without touching on personal experiences I may say that I have met some of the greatest men of the age, politicians, artists, explorers, musicians and writers; but among them all he stood out in strong relief. He was so essentially human and never was there the slightest hint of trying to show off his power and knowledge, a failing one sees often amongst the world's favourités. His love for his little grandson was one very noticeable trait in his character, and amongst his own paintings is one of a group of "Teddy Bears" on a good sized canvas, painted—so says the inscription, at the wish of "Little William."

 Late Samuel Bonsfield

The funeral of the late Samuel The funeral of the late Samuel Bonsheld took place on Saturday to Mount Hope cemetery from the undertaking parlors of H. S. Peirce. A number of his friends from Ingersoll attended the sad ceremonies, which were conducted by the Rev. C. W. Saunders. The circumstances of his death are very sad, he having been engaged to an Ingersoll farmer's daughter, the wedding being postponed on account of his enlisting. His friends are firmly convinced that the shooting which resulted in his death was an accident.

Late W. S. Wilson, The funeral of the late W. S. Wilson took place from the residence on Saturday. The services, which were of an impressive and solem were of an impressive and solemn character, were conducted at the late home by Venerable Archdeacon Mackenzie, assisted by the Rev. C. E. Jeakins, while the Rev Patterson-Smythe officiated at the side of the grave. Many friends attended the ceremonies and a wealth of flowers spoke volumes for the respect and esteem in which the deceased had been held in life.

The pallbearers were W. Manales

The pallbearers were W. Manales, I. Ferris, G. Mitchell, W. H. Harris, C. Kay and F. Jones.

Rose Coleman, aged twelve, was instantly killed when a 22 rifle in the hands of her seventeen-year-old hrother was discharged in their mother's home at Fort Erie.
