THE WOMAN'S VENGEANCE

BY BERTHA M. CLAY

Hardinge said, with one of his chill smiles...

At the gate of the church-yard Esther...

Esther called up the short path, to the gate...

Hardinge had stepped forward to speak...

As that instant a carriage dashed up...

At the other end of the room Esther...

At that moment she was looking at her...

But when he would have stepped back...

"Let us go across the fields," Esther...

"Oh, we are not afraid of a little mud!"...

"Where you go, I will follow," she said...

"Then you must turn here," pausing before...

"If you young people will excuse me,"...

"I have a great deal to say to you,"...

"I have a great deal to say to you,"...

"The sun, and a little, deep, silent lake..."

"I don't believe in spells! In fact, if you were to ask me my belief, I should have to answer you by a positive 'no'..."

"What a lovely little thing," she was thinking...

"It is here on a visit, then?" she asked...

"Yes, it is here on a visit, then?" she asked...

"No! It's habit, I suppose, and that's everything..."

"Oh, he has been here! He looks like a man who has been here a long time..."

"Dulcie, standing alone, in one of the little windows..."

"Yes, I mean it; just that and nothing more..."

"I want to look well," Dulcie said candidly...

"Oh, yes, but not to-night! Let me see what I can do for you..."

"It is a pretty dress, isn't it, Betty?" she asked...

"I'm sorry, I should be afraid to have you see it..."

"I'm sorry, I should be afraid to have you see it..."

"I'm sorry, I should be afraid to have you see it..."

"I'm sorry, I should be afraid to have you see it..."
