AN INSECTICIDE

White Arsenic is Well Recommended as a Substitute for Paris Green.

For several years white arsenic has been employed in an experimental way as a substitute for Paris Green, but the amount used has been relatively small. At the present time the cost of arsenic in large quantities is about seven cents a pound, while Paris Green in like amounts is about fifteen cents. In smaller amounts a similar difference will be found. Paris Green is but about fifty per cent. arsenic even when pure, and many reports of its adulteration are received. Arsenic then will go nearly twice as far, and as it costs but one-half as much per pound, it will be but one-fourth as expensive as Paris Green.

Arsenic is but slowly soluble in water and many report that if placed in water well stirred up and applied to the plants immediately no injury is shown, but it is immediately dissolved in the water, and the arsenic is then in the plants. When arsenic is boiled in lime water it forms an arsenite of lime and is chemically the same as London Purple, except for the coloring matter of the latter. We prepare the arsenic by boiling one pound with two pounds of lime in two gallons of water for forty minutes. For spraying fruit trees this will answer for 400 gallons of water, but for the potato beetle only 200 gallons can be used.

If a combined insecticide and fungicide is desired, the arsenic preparation can be added to 400 gallons of Bordeaux mixture. This can be used with safety upon nearly all trees, but upon those with tender foliage we find it advisable to add a pound of lime to each 20 gallons of the spraying material if Bordeaux mixture is not used.

It will not do to use air-slaked lime, but it should be fresh lime as far as possible in the same manner as for Bordeaux mixture. Care should be taken that the arsenic is not mistaken for some of the household chemicals. It should be put away out of the reach of children, and it will be advisable to use in some sort of other coloring matter.

Inspection of Nurseries.
Most of the "nurseries" inspected have been found practically free from insect pests of a serious nature. Ten important species have been found at different times, however, in sufficient numbers to do serious injury. In all cases efforts were at once made to clean out the stock thus infested. The most important insect which attacks nursery stock in this state is the San Jose scale. It is important to nurserymen not only because of the injury which it may do to the infested stock, but because it is greatly dreaded by both dealers and fruit growers alike. Hence stock from a nursery which is known to have been once infested, does not find a ready sale.

Experiments in dipping and spraying young nursery trees indicate that plant lice may be controlled in the nursery by dipping the curled tips of infested trees in a solution of whale oil soap, 1 pound to 7 gallons of water. The work should be done early in the season. Flea beetles attacking young pear and apple trees may be held in check by spraying with green arsenic, 1 pound to 100 gallons of water, and the canker worm will succumb to the same treatment.

The experiments in fumigating nursery stock with hydrocyanic acid gas, when the stock is piled in the cellar for winter storage, indicate that this method may prove practical, thus avoiding the necessity of building special fumigating houses.—N. Y. Experimental Bulletin, No. 138.

Preventative of Carnation Rust.
Many carnationists believe not only that common salt is a preventative of carnation rust but also that it is a decided promoter of vigor in growth of the plants themselves. Experiments made by the Station have proven that neither of these beliefs rests on a sound basis.

In experiments made in 1896 (Bulletin No. 100) spraying the plants with salt solution failed to prevent rust in the least and none of the plants seemed more vigorous because of the saline shower. In tests made in 1898 no rust appeared on any of the plants, either treated or untreated; but the "salted" carnations did no better than the others in size or vigor.

In 1898 carnations were grown in soil to which salt solutions of different strength were added and they showed an injurious effect from the salt solution. Five of ten plants each were used in this experiment, one lot being untreated and the others receiving from one-fourth of a gram to five grams of salt per plant at each of eight applications about two weeks apart. The non-appearance of rust rendered that feature of the experiment useless; but an experienced carnationist, wholly unacquainted with the treatment given the plants was asked to pass judgment upon them. He pronounced the check lot best, the two lots receiving one gram and one fourth gram per plant about equal and second best and the two lots receiving two and five grams about equal and poorest. Similar results followed a similar test in 1897 and the rust was worse, if there was any difference whatever, on the salted plants.—N. Y. Bulletin, No. 128.

Bristles.
When the pigs at eight weeks old but don't do it suddenly. An early as three or four weeks they must begin to eat a little and should have a little trough of dainties to tempt their appetite. It will soon increase and at eight weeks the pigs will scarcely miss their dam.

The feed cooker can be used to a good advantage for steaming clover hay when fed once or twice a week. If not often through the winter months, and they seem to eat the grain better when fed some rough or steamed feed.

MADE A GOOD IMPRESSION.

A Case of Well Developed Nerve, Coupled With Wit.

"There is absolute wit in some men's nerve," said a business man to a reporter. "My partner and I, with the intention of expanding our business, about a year ago decided to send a representative through the south. We looked over the field carefully and finally picked out a young man who was possessed of good address and who, we felt sure, would do the work."

"He had been convivial in former days, but his department had been such for a year that it made us feel confident he would do the proper thing. He was given $400 for expenses and was started out on the mission. It was the understanding that he was to make a daily report of his efforts."

"Two months passed by, and we never heard from him. We telegraphed repeatedly to different towns that were on his itinerary, but not a word could be learned regarding his whereabouts. Finally one day a hurried telegram, collect, came. It read: "I am not selling many goods, but am making a fine impression. Wire $100 quick."

"The nerve of the fellow got our nerve, and, do you know, we wired him the $100, and afterward he made good. We have never asked him what he did during the two months, and he has never broached the subject to us. It was the wit that pleased us."

Siberian Camels.
The native camels of Siberia are a source of constant wonder to travelers. On the Mongolian plateau, for instance, the thermometer often registers a temperature of 40 degrees below zero, but the camels do not mind it at all, walking about as blithely as if the weather were as balmy as spring. On the other hand, the temperature on the Gobi desert in summer is sometimes 140 degrees above zero, and the beasts mind that heat just as little as they do the extreme cold.

Mohammed and the Hill.
Mohammed made the people believe that he would call a hill to him and from the top of it offer up his prayers for the observers of his law. The people assembled, Mohammed called the hill to come to him again and again, and when the hill stood still he was never a whit abashed, but said, "If the hill will not come to Mohammed, Mohammed will go to the hill."

The Conditions.
"Will this car take me to the plaza?" asked the excited old lady of the placid motorman.

"Well, under certain conditions—yes," replied the motorman.

"What are the conditions?" asked the old lady, still further perturbed.

"That you get on and pay your fare."

ADVICE TO THE LOVER.

The Way to Conduct a Courtship With a Happy Ending.

Don't be too sudden about it. Many a girl has said "no" when she meant "yes" simply because her lover didn't choose the right time and pop the question gently.

Take a dark night for it. Have the blinds closed, the curtains down, and the lamp turned most on. Sit near enough to her so that you can hook your little finger into hers.

Wait until conversation begins to flag, and then quietly remark: "Susie, I want to ask you something."

She will fidget about a little, and probably reply: "Yes."

After a pause, you can add: "Susie, my actions must have shown—that is, you must have seen—I mean you must be aware that—"

Pause here for a while, but keep your little finger firmly locked. See may cough and try to turn the subject off by asking how you liked the sermon, but she only does it to encourage you. After a pause you can continue:

"I was thinking as I was coming up the street to-night, that before I went away I would ask you—that is, I would broach the subject nearest my heart—I mean I would know you."

Stop again, and give her hand a gentle squeeze. She may make a move to get away, or she may not. In either case it augurs well for you. Wait five minutes, and then go on:

"The past year has been a very happy one to me, but I hope that future years will be still happier. However, that depends entirely on you. I am here to-night to know—that is, to ask you—I am here to-night to hear from your own lips the one sweet—"

Wait again. It isn't best to be too rash about such things. Give her plenty of time to recover her composure, and then put your hand on your heart and continue:

"Yes, I thought as I was coming here to-night how happy I had been, and I said to myself that if I only knew—if I was only certain that my heart had not deceived me, and you were ready to share—"

Hold on—there's no hurry about it. Give the wind a chance to sob and moan outside amongst the trees. This will make her handsome, and call up the love in her heart. When she begins to cough and grow restless, you can go on:

"Before I met you, this world was a desert to me. I didn't take any pleasure in life, and it didn't matter whether the sun shone or not. But what a change in one short year! It is for you to say whether my future shall be a prairie of happiness or one long and never-ending pathway of thistles. Speak, dearest Susie, and say—and say five minutes more by the clock, and then add:

"That you will be—that is that you will be mine!"

She will heave a sigh, look up at the clock and round the room, and then, as she slides her hand over your vest pocket, she will whisper:

"Henry—I will."

The Gravediggers Grave Dole.
This is a story told by the publisher of a big religious weekly of his personal experience. It is a queer story, but true as preaching. He says: "You know I live over in the old Greenwich village section, and the best established families there, those who have occupied the same houses for half a century, hold that one might almost as well be dead as not to have your death notice in a paper. A few days ago my brother-in-law died, and though I had promised to have a death notice inserted the next morning, I neglected it. The following day I arranged for the notice, and went over to Hekensack to have a grave opened. Several of the Ninth ward families have lots in the same cemetery."

"I entered the office of the cemetery and stated to the superintendent, a sober faced German, that Mr. — was dead and a grave must be dug in, immediately in the family lot."

"Mr. — dead!" the head gravedigger exclaimed; "why when did he die?"

"He died day before yesterday."

"But aren't you mistaken? All those families have their death notices in the paper. I read the paper carefully this morning and yesterday morning, and his name was not in the list. Why, when there is a notice you don't have to make any other arrangement or give me any funeral notice. I always have the grave opened at once."

"And, grotesque as it appears, I had all that I could do to persuade the faithful old man that Mr. — was really dead and that the grave must be dug, notice or no notice. But I honestly believe that he would have turned me out as an impostor if I had not explained how the slip occurred, apologized abjectly and promised solemnly that the paper of the next morning should contain the notice."
