WORLD'S HORSES ARRIVING.

Collection of Equine Beauties Gathered in London For Show.

Lovers of beautiful horses will note with pleasure the growth of the interest in the great international horse show at Olympia, which exceeds even the ardent dreams of the organizers. By June 7 London will see the best horses of the world. Stabling will have to be found for over 1,000 horses outside Olympia.

Excitement about the show is expressed in scores of cablegrams from all over the world. The Canadian Government is making an official grant so that their horses may be worthily represented. The Ministers for War in Belgium and France have given special leave to officers to wear uniform in the riding and jumping competitions, and very attractive some of the light blue uniforms will look. A number of fine jumpers and harness horses are arriving from Spain and Belgium. From Paris, M. Roy, one of the most famous dealers in the world, is sending sixteen carriage horses; and M. Thoms, the millionaire, known for his incomparable "turn-out" to every Parisian, has entered many singles and pairs.

The American and Canadian entries are not yet complete. But besides Mr. Vanderbilt's troupe of twenty-seven, Mr. Armour is sending his six splendid greys, which are the champion draught—not, as has been said, park—horses of America, and they will be conspicuous by the lights that they are fitted into their harness. They will compete with the splendid teams owned especially by English breeders, of whom Mr. Watney's will be among the best.

But even apart from the international element, the show will be incomparably the finest and most representative collection of English and Irish horses ever seen anywhere. Not single well-known stable is unrepresented, and those who are rather foolishly afraid that the show will be too spectacular for serious horsemen may calm their fears on this score.

It was said at first that the price of the boxes was prohibitive, but over one-third have been already taken, each for the whole week, and the American colony, it is said, are determined to make of the occasion as great a social success as the Madison Square shows, in which, however, horses are apt to come rather a long way after diamonds in general interest.

Among competitions new to English people will be the horn-blowing, and many points are to be given in certain classes for smartness of harness, coach and livery, on which the Americans spend the minutest care. Between 25,000 and 28,000 will be given in prizes, and that English horse will have a large share of the triumph may be expected.

Farming in New Zealand.

A correspondent writes from Dunedin: There is no work in New Zealand for any more people at the present time. Hundreds cannot get employment; and, as for the fruit in the King Country, there is no market for same. The railroads and freight trucks away all the profits. I know several instances that have come under my notice as an agent. In one case a farmer sent 160 bags of potatoes from a country district. He had to leave them at the nearest railway station, pay rail charges and commission, and the only return he got was £1, which did not pay for the seed, and I could not ask any commission. Fruit in a country district near Dunedin is left to rot on the trees, as it would not pay to send by rail, the charges being too high. If you allow the people to come to New Zealand (they will come on a fool's errand) they will be stranded; hundreds would go back if they had the money. This is not a country for anyone to come to unless they have £200 or over. By the time they look around, get a place, plant it, and reap the harvest it would take double the money before it was their own.

The Discipline of Delay.

God's best gifts come slowly. We could not use them as he wants us to use them if they did not. Many a man who is called of God to the doing of a work in which he is pouring out his life, and rightly convinced that God means to bring that work to abundant success, nevertheless grows discouraged at times and chafes that "results" do not come. But growth and strength in waiting are results, greater results often than the end that is so impatiently longed for. No one who has ever done real great work for God did them quickly. Paul had time to realize this as he lay in prison; Moses must have wondered "why" many times during the delays in Midian and the wilderness. Jesus, himself experienced the discipline of delay in his thirty silent years. God means to send us that success in his work that we so eagerly pray for. But He cannot send it until the blessing of waiting has first fitted us to use the later blessing aright when it comes. Our acceptance of this preliminary blessing determines our receiving of that for which we wait.

Fen Country Speaks.

South Lincolnshire has its haunted house. It is situated at Marton, and for some time past the occupiers, it is said, have been disturbed at nights by unaccountable rappings at the doors and windows. Up to the present the cause in an absolute mystery. One evening three distinct knocks were heard at the front door, but upon the tenant proceeding to open it no one was there. Shortly afterwards the knockings were repeated. The same thing occurred on subsequent nights, and the village policeman ordered himself to watch and see if anyone was playing a prank. While he was thus engaged the knocks were frequently heard, and so loud occasionally that they were audible to the next-door neighbour. On one occasion the tapping came to the door while the policeman stood by, and when there was absolutely nothing to reveal the cause of it. All attempts to unravel the mystery have proved in vain. The house has become notorious, and many people have visited it with the object of hearing the supernatural tapping for themselves.

One and a Million.

"That's the first time I ever sold a single envelope," said the young woman at a big stationer's store in the city's center. "I've always sold them in packages, but that gentleman came in with a letter in his hand and asked for an envelope, and I sold him one for a cent. I imagine that's the smallest sale that has been made in this establishment since it opened. The biggest I ever made happened to be in the envelope line too. A rather roughly dressed man came in, asked to see our envelopes and wanted to know the price by the thousand. I told him. Then he asked the price by the million. I got the figures from our manager, who smiled as he gave them to me. Yet the man ordered a million envelopes, and when we asked for reference he said he would as lief pay the bill on the spot, which he did from a roll of yellow bank notes about the size of a loaf of bread. We delivered the envelopes, but haven't seen the purchaser since."

A Square Deal

Is assured you when you buy Dr. Pierce's family medicines for all the ingredients entering into them are printed on the bottle-wrappers and their formulas are attested under oath as being complete and correct. You know just what you are paying for and that the ingredients are gathered from Nature's laboratory, being selected from the most valuable native medicinal roots found growing in our American forests and while potent to cure are perfectly harmless even to the most delicate women and children. No drop of alcohol enters into their composition. A much better agent is used both for external and internal use, and the medicinal principles are preserved in a pure, refined glycerine. This agent possesses intrinsic medicinal properties of its own, being a most valuable antiseptic and antiferment, nutritive and soothing demulcent.

NEW LANDS FOUND.

Result of Surveyor's Trip North of Prince Albert.

The more we know about Canada the more we realize that its resources have hitherto been entirely underestimated. In one of the first numbers of the Prince Albert Advocate to reach eastern Canada after the recent railway blockade, there is an interesting article covering the trip of Mr. J. N. Wallace, D. L. S., who left Prince Albert in May, 1906, to survey the fourteenth baseline running north of township 52 and who returned to Prince Albert at the end of the following March after about eight months in the north. Interviewed by an Advocate reporter, Mr. Wallace said his party experienced considerable difficulty through large muskegs in the summer and deep snows in winter, and of the fourteen pack ponies with which he started out only five survived. He found several considerable errors in the location of lakes and rivers in the unsurveyed territory as shown on existing maps, and in one case this got him out of a serious difficulty.

Shortly before the freeze-up he was, according to the old maps, about 25 miles from the Hudson Bay post at Pasquia Mountains and 23 from Birch Island. The nearest food supply was at the post, and there was no fodder nearer than a cache on Birch Island. The camp was reduced to such straits that to go for food meant the starvation of the horses and to return for fodder a similar fate for the men. Mr. Wallace decided to sacrifice the horses and started out for the Hudson Bay post, which he suddenly came upon in township 52, range 7, instead of in 53, range 4, as he had expected. The post being 16 miles nearer than was known saved a journey of 90 miles, and Birch Island was reached in time to save the horses. Indian Reserve 29A is close to the post and is on the maps shown 16 miles east of its true position.

After running the 14th baseline from the third to the second meridian, Mr. Wallace went north to the Carrot river and ran the meridian from there to the Saskatchewan, a distance of only about 16 miles. He made the return trip to Prince Albert almost in a straight line, via Fort La Corne, his pack ponies traveling 160 miles in nine days.

Mr. Wallace passed through large forests of spruce and tamarack on the line and he states that he found the Pasquia Mountains to be 1,500 feet high. During the whole period of absence the party only lost two weeks' time. There was a good deal of excellent agricultural land seen about Birch Lake and on the Candle Lake trail.

Ancient Counterfeits.

It is difficult to think of counterfeiters in connection with the golden days of Charles I., but a recent discovery of old coins in the well which is being excavated in the ruins of Scarborough Castle, England, seems to prove that they not only existed at that time, but were frequently in danger from the officers of the law.

The find in question consisted of a large mass of copper or brass strips, two of which coins had been punched, together with a number of imperfectly struck coins. The discovery took place at a distance of 180 feet from the surface of the ground.

H. A. Grueber, the keeper of the coins at the British Museum, to whom a portion of the find was sent, pronounced them to be incomplete farthings of the reign of Charles I. issued between 1626 and 1630. It appears that the right to issue these coins was granted by King Charles to the Dowager Duchess of Richmond and Sir Francis Crane, who no doubt made a considerable profit on the monopoly. The result of this extensive forgeries has been that the British Museum's expert is of opinion that the coins found during the excavations at Scarborough Castle are forgeries struck at the time, and that in all probability they were thrown down the well to escape detection.

From the Dim Past.

There have just been placed on exhibition in the Egyptian galleries of the British Museum a select few of the Egyptian inscriptions recently discovered in the Sinaitic peninsula. One of the most interesting is a sandstone stele and altar set up by Sebekher-heb, an overseer of the Royal apartments, and a subordinate official named Kemon, who were attached to the Royal Chancery. The tablet, which is dated in the forty-fourth year of Amen-hot III., about B. C. 1800, is of red sandstone, and contains an inscription in which a prayer is offered to Athor, the "Lady of the turquoise land," by which name the Sinaitic peninsula was known to the Ancient Egyptians. There is also the lower portion of a statue of Osiris, I. L. B. O. 2333, dedicated to Hathor by the King's officials stationed in Sinai, and the lower portion of a seated figure of Hathor, dedicated to the goddess of Seneferu, a captain of the boats in the reign of Amen-hot III. The objects were discovered at Serabit-el-Khadim in the Sinaitic peninsula, and were presented to the British Museum by the Egypt Exploration Fund.

A Weather Stone.

There exists a stone which, it is said, unfailingly foretells the changes in the weather. The stone was found in Finland many years ago by an explorer and has since been watched by scientists with great interest. It presents a white, mottled appearance in sunshine, gradually turning from gray to black as a rainstorm approaches. The stone is composed of clay, pter and rock salt. In dry weather the salt in the stone is prominent, but when the air is filled with moisture the salt absorbs the moisture and turns black, thus forming the barometer.
