WHY NOT OWN AN AUTOMOBILE?

If automobiles are needed anywhere at all they are in the country. One of the speakers of the Women's Institute, at Guelph, recently predicted that the time was near at hand when farmer's wives would run their own automobiles. Nor is the prediction a visionary one. Like the telephone and the trolley, the automobile seems destined to add to the comfort of country life, and the cost will not interfere with your buying. We can sell at a mere fraction of original cost. These cars are taken by us as part payment for the newest and latest models, and are such as we can thoroughly recommend. Any machine we send out is guaranteed to be in first-class condition, and beyond the fact that second-hand cars are not this year's style, there is nothing wrong with them in any way. We use them as a means of introduction to the country trade, and make the values extra special to encourage quick buying. If interested, send your name and address for fuller particulars.

Good Second-Hand Machines

SLIDES TWO CATCHERS.

Cantillon Lets Kahoe, the Veteran, and Blankenship, the Kid, Go Their Own Ways.

Cleveland, Aug. 26.—Joe Cantillon, of the Washington American League, leases to Mike Kahoe, veteran backstop, and to Cliff Blankenship, his youthful catcher, who was considered a find two years ago. Blankenship succeeded in getting Walter Johnson's name to a Washington contract, and out of gratitude it is common belief he would hold his place.

FINES AND SUSPENSIONS.

Pres. Ban Johnson Deals With Unglaub and Schaefer and Cantillon May Yet Feel the Wrath.

Cleveland, Aug. 26.—Pres. Ban Johnson dealt fines, suspensions and election orders to the Washington players today following yesterday's riot at umpire Billy Evans and the latter's telegraphic reports to the league's head. A written report by the umpire on Joe Cantillon's conduct on Wednesday is expected to result in his feeling the wrath of the president.

By Johnson's orders, wired here today, Bob Unglaub is fined $25. Schaefer is fined $50 and indefinitely suspended and trainer Edginger is barred from all American League parks hereafter.

This followed the benching and ejection of Schaefer and Unglaub yesterday. In that clash Cantillon is accused of having encouraged the players and Edginger is alleged to have lifted up his voice. He is signed on a player's contract and wears a uniform. Umpire Evans accuses Cantillon of deliberately trying to make the game a farce by refusing to put in substitutes for Schaefer and Unglaub and with trying to force a forfeit.

The Washington manager had not been notified of any punishment when the team left tonight, but baseball men expect him to come under the wrath tomorrow.

WARNING TO COBB.

Unofficially Pres. Johnson Says There's Too Much Spiking of Players at Detroit.

Chicago, Aug. 26.—Once more spiking of a fellow player may put a sudden quietus to the glittering career of Tyus Raymond Cobb, star of the Champion Detroit Club. Pres. Johnson tonight declared himself and in no mild tones against the tactics of the Georgia peach, who is said to have maliciously driven his armored shoes against third baseman Barker's arm during the series just closed between the Athletics and Tigers.

"There's been altogether too much of the sort of game at Detroit," asserted Mr. Johnson, "and somebody is going to be made a shining example if I hear of any more of it."

PITTSBURG HAS 1001 HITS.

Leads Both Leagues in This Respect As Well As in Number of Runs Scored, 511.

Pittsburg, Aug. 26.—Interesting baseball figures made public here tonight by the statistician of the Pittsburgh baseball club show that the Pittsburgh team to date leads both leagues in the number of hits and runs secured, being the first club to get 1000 hits and the first to make more than 500 runs. Pittsburgh has 1001 hits and 511 runs to its credit.

Pittsburg and New York of the National league are tied for first place in the number of home runs made this season, both having 20, this being the record in both major leagues. Tommy Leach of Pittsburg is the champion run getter in the major leagues with 94.

WITH THE FIGHTERS.

Jack Johnson and Battling Nelson deny the report that they contemplated going into the hotel business. England is to have another championship heavyweight bout between Champion Moir and Ian Macvic. Will no one stop these cruel affairs?

An Atlanta scrapper has taken the name of "Young Dunkhorst." If he fights like the original "human freight car" they had better stop him before he starts.

Sailor Burke still contends that he was doped in his recent bout with Willie Lewis. Put it in writing, Sailor, and send it to the Hallmark of Bullfight.

"Mexican Pete" Everett, the heavy-weight, has returned home and is in jail in Trinidad, Col. Pete claims he was training for a fight with Jim Flynn, but the police say he was beating his wife.

Fame may come to a man suddenly and go just as quickly.

THE LITTLE MAJOR.

"Gave it away. Confound them, they took it."

"If I have to go to breakfast without a drink this morning it will be the first time in thirty years."

The regret and horror in his tone are simply impossible to reproduce. One would have thought that the speaker had met with the greatest misfortune of his life. From his point of view, perhaps he had.

Charlie, as he listened, chuckled to himself. His fun-loving nature saw a great opportunity. But he would wait a little for the development of events.

"Well," said Higgs, in a despondent tone, "what are you going to do about it?"

"There's only one way," replied Dare, after a pause, during which he had evidently been racking his brains as whisky had let him. "You pretend to be sick, and I'll do the begging."

Higgs snorted in disgust.

"Yes, and then you get the stuff and I have to beg from you."

He undoubtedly spoke from bitter experience.

"That's it precisely," retorted Dare, with a hoarse laugh.

"Nice look-out for me," disgustedly, "I'll tell you what I'll do," said Dare, after a pause in a conciliatory sort of way. "I'll have the cramps and you make the brace."

"That's more like it."

"Remember, you're not to drink a drop until we get back to quarters."

"All right," agreed Higgs, cheerfully. "If the little major's about, I'll tackle her. I'm pretty solid there."

Charlie gnashed his teeth in rage at this conceited speech, and determined that he would have his revenge for it, and at no distant date, either.

He drew back a little as Higgs came up the steps to the kitchen door and struck his knuckles against it with a resounding rap.

Then Charlie called out in as ferocious a tone as he could assume: "Come in!"

The effect upon the anglo-maniac dude was electric. He staggered back and almost fell headlong down the steps.

"What's the matter, man?" exclaimed Dare, half disgusted and half alarmed. Higgs' teeth were chattering so that he could scarcely answer, but finally he managed to spit out:

"It's that bloodthirsty lieutenant. On second thought, I'd better have the cramps and you do the begging."

Dare scarcely liked this but his thirst overpowered him, and after a moment or two of hesitation, he consented.

Higgs, however, with a proper consideration of his own person, absolutely refused to accompany him. He declared that he could have the cramps, as well if not better, outside than inside.

Dare made no demur. There were probably reasons of his own why he thought it would be more to his advantage not to do so, but assuming his most dignified manner, he strutted up the steps and knocked.

Charlie met him on his entrance in an exaggeratedly cordial manner.

"Good morning, good morning, Judge. Sit down. You're out early."

"Yes," said Dare, making a desperate attempt to appear quite at ease. "I came to see the doctor."

"I'm afraid he's out," said Charlie, and then he asked in the most sympathetic manner in the world. "What's wrong?"

Dare's face at once put on a most woe-begon expression.

"Ah, poor Higgs!" he sighed. "He's got a bad attack of cramps."

"So," replied Charlie, pityingly, but consumed with laughter within.

"Where is he?"

The judge shook his head dolefully, implying that his unfortunate friend was very low indeed.

"In his bunk, doubled up like a hair-pin. Now, there's something, I've heard the doctor say was good for cramps."

"Peppermint?" suggested Charlie, maliciously.

Dare shook his head, twirling his hat between his hands and looking into it as if trying to get inspiration from there.

"Ginger?"

"No," he reflectively. "Begins with a B, I think."

Charlie bent his brows as if using all his faculties to discover what it might be, and then exclaimed suddenly:

"Brandy?"

Dare's face fairly beamed, and then, trying to conceal his satisfaction, he coughed behind his hand.

"Ah, that's it," he said. "Strange I couldn't think of it."

If his life had been at stake, Charlie could scarcely have kept from laughing. The situation was too absurd.

"There's plenty of it in the other room," he said. He was not unwilling to oblige Dare, but he was determined that Higgs should not have a smell of it. "I'll fetch it for you."

The judge was profuse in his thanks, but Charlie, without waiting to listen to him, disappeared into the next room only to reappear with the nearly full decanter.

"Here, help yourself."

Dare looked about a little helplessly. He did not quite like to take the decanter and all away.

Charlie took pity on him.

"You haven't got the cramps yourself, have you, Judge?" he suggested.

Dare was not the man not to take advantage of the hint, and his eyes sparkled as they fell upon the brown liquid which his heart craved.

"Well, I don't feel extra well," he acknowledged.

"Better take a nip yourself."

"Thanks," was the immediate response, and the decanter was at once tipped to release a generous supply down the judge's throat.

"Judge," said Charlie, rising his voice a little as he heard a slight snuffling sound on the porch outside and knew that Higgs was listening: "Judge, I'm going to be married."

"So?" smiling at the chance thus afforded him and again rising the decanter, "here's to your future happiness."

"Thank you."

"Who is the bride to be?"

"The little major."

A muffled groan from the porch gave delight to Charlie's heart.

"Here's to the little major," exclaimed Dare, suiting the action to the word. If he went on this way there would soon not be much left in the decanter.

"Just mention the matter to Higgs, said Charlie, cheerily. "It might help my stomach."

"Does Higgs like coffee?"

"Push—push—passionately fond of it," declared the judge, beginning to show the effects of his numerous potations.

"Then he shall have some."

And Charlie strode across the kitchen, flung open the door and dashed out the contents of the cup full in the face of the unfortunate Higgs, who was bending forward in a listening attitude.

With a howl the New Yorker staggered back down the steps.

Just then the bugle sounded the call of "boots and saddles," and with a hasty farewell to the judge, Charlie dashed away, without a glance at Higgs, who was sputtering and wiping the hot fluid from his eyes.

It is safe, however, to say that the wily judge passed a rather uncomfortable quarter of an hour because of his duplicité.

Chicago, Ill., Aug. 28.—Chicago won both games of a double-header from Washington, 6 to 4 and 2 to 1 today.

Gray performed the peculiar feat of holding Chicago to one hit, but allowed them to score six runs without an error by his support. In the second inning he gave eight bases on balls and seven of these came in succession, forcing in five runs. The only hit was a high bouncer over Unlaub's head with which Dougherty opened the second. Chicago won the second by scoring one run in each of the eighth and ninth. Killifer's fumble of Tannehill's grounder allowed Parent to score the winning run with two out in the ninth. NATIONAL LEAGUE.

Boston, Mass., Aug. 28.—Cincinnati stole the bases winning streak by defeating them in an exciting game today, 7 to 6. Brown was batted hard towards the last of the game. Boston led the bases full in the 9th with one out, but Manager Smith, batting for Shaw, struck out, and Shean's best effort was a fly to centre. The score:— Cincinnati 000101032—7 10 2 Boston 202000002—6 6 2 Batteries: Spede, Fromme and Loh; Brown and Graham. Time—1:59. Umpire—Emble.

SUNDAY GAMES.

American League.

Detroit, Mich., Aug. 29.—Detroit mixed six hits with two errors and a pass in the first two innings and got such a lead that Manning, who pitched, who was good after that, had no chance. New York could do nothing with Donovan until he was eased up in the ninth. Crawford and Cobb featured the game by their batting and base-running, while Engle was the fielding star.
