HUNGRY PEOPLE MENAGED STORES

Lack of Food During Bakers' Strike at Madrid Stirred Up the Poor

Madrid, July 1.—The sun prevented what threatened to be a serious outbreak in Madrid during the recent bakers' strike. The first two days of the bread scarcity were dull and threatening and the hungry poor were so affected by the lowering skies and the lack of food that they paraded the streets in groups uttering shouts and menacing storekeepers who kept their establishments open.

On the third day the sun shone and although still hungry and compelled to wait indefinite hours for the loaves to be doled out, the people did so patiently and even cheerily. All kinds of laws and police regulations were broken by the men, women and children forming the almost endless bread lines, but the authorities took a lenient view of what had occurred.

When an old man brought a camp bedstead, set it up on the sidewalk and stretched himself on it, a policeman arrested him and led him to the station house with his bed. The police captain first looked grave, then began to laugh when the offender explained he knew he might have to wait anything from twelve to twenty hours for his bread, and had merely looked a lenient view of what had occurred.

Another group hired a barrel organ whose owner played popular melodies while the people waiting with growing appetites and hollow stomachs danced merrily. On the Calle de la Magdalena a cobbler arrived carrying a stool, his tools and a pair of shoes, which he was able to sole and heel before his turn came to obtain a loaf.

Similar scenes were enacted day after day amid general hilarity until the municipal authorities decided to break up the big bread lines by distributing loaves from a larger number of centers. The danger was then over.
