WHILE out shooting, in company with ome others, at Point des Roches, near Pracadie, on Monday last, Mr. John Robinson, of St. John, N. B., met with a Robinson, of St. John, N. B., met with a rather serious accident. He rested his gun on a log, when it exploded and the charge entered his left arm near the wrist. Such assistance as could be given by his companious was applied and medical aid was summoned from Mount Stewart. He is now in the P. E. Island Hospital.

A SHOCKING accident happened Saturday last on Buston Street, Mr. and Mrs. Jas. Hann, of Dromore, were coming past the Foundry corner with their horse and truck. Mr. Hann was seated on the forward part of the truck. Something frightened the horse, a young salmal not used to the town, and he began to rear, causing Mr. Hann, who was leading him along, to let go of the bridle. Mrs. Hann picked up the reins on the truck and tried to eto; the horse, which by this time had begun to

Her spine was very badly hurt and five ribs were broken. She was taken to the residence of her sister, Mrs. James Dunn, on Upper Queen Streee, and Dr. Kelly was called in, who did all he could to relieve the poor woman. way to this country, Lord Reasel, sitting as a trial judge in the Queen's boneh division of the high coart of justice, rendered an interesting decision relating to the validity of search-warrants, and in a case which was tried before him without a jury in June, and then taken under advisement. To suite was against a magistrate to recover demages for having issued a search warrant without authority of law. The person whose effects were searched under this warrant was a butler, and the warrant had been obtained against him by his master. who accused the man of theft at the time he was about to leave his master's employment. Nothing was found that could be proved to have been stolen, and the butler was acquitted of the charge of larceny. He then sued the justice of the peace who issued the searth warrant; alleging that the instrument was fat-tily defective because there was no averment or proof before the magistrate that anything had actually been stolen, and because nother the warrant nor the complaint upon which it was granted specified the goods to be searched for. In his judgment, delivered on the 5th of August, the lord chief justice overruled both these objections, and decided that the search warrant was valid and afforded ample protection to the defendent. It is not necessary under the existing English law according to Lord Russel, to allege the actual commission of a felony in order to give the magistrate power to issue a search warrant in this class of cases, sets out reasonable grounds for the belief that the goods are being feloniously dealt with by the defendent. As to the failure of the warrant in this particular proceeding to indicate just what property was to be searched for, the lord chief justice says: "I cannot find it anywhere laid down that a search warrant must specify the goods, and, indeed, it is easy to suggest many cases where it might be impossible for the persons laying the information and the warrant are drawn up in that way." As to this second point, the general rule in the states of t

The Montreal Star publishes an interesting interview with Baron Russell, Lord Chief Justice of England, who is at present visiting Canada. The two topics of public interest touched ou in the course of the interview were international arbitration and religious education in its relation to the State. Lord Russell's views on the former of these two questions were fully set forth in his recent address at Saratoga. The gist of his remaks on that occasion may be gathered from his statement to the Star representative: "I can only say that, if it is necessary, until the moral sense of the nations is educated sufficiently, then there must be a combination of the nations concerned in the arbitration
