He alluded to the great powers and privileges exercised by the Roman Catholic clergy in that province, and pointed out the difficulties which Protestant missionaries had to face there. But 5 per cent of the French of the mission was the evangelization and education of French Canadians. The speaker declared that Romanism was incompatible with enlightenment, saying it was a Jesuit doctrine that "You must be as a dead body in the presence of your ecclesiastical superiors." 45 per cent of the French Canadian population cannot write, and 35 per cent. cannot read. There are now five French Protestant churches in the Province and boys and girls have been educated through the efforts of Protestant missionaries. There are 75,000 French Canadians in Ontario, and 500,000 in the United States. ## 5TH OF NOVEMBER

Auniversary Sermion by Rev. J. Wakefield.

On Sunday last, an anniversary sermon was preached to the Orangemen of Goderich in the Methodist Church by Rev. John Wakefield. The preacher took for his text from Rev. xiv, chap. In the opinion of many these verses were a prophetic announcement relating to Luther. The mission of Protestantism was to protest against the irregula rities which had crept into the Church of Rome anterior to the time of Luther. They who protested were willing to obey the behests of the Emperor in matters political, but they protested against be-ing bound by Rome in matters spiritual. Protestantiism had spread greatly and had been greatly blessed as an element paid. Currie, the auctioneer, was in good humor and capital voice, and rattled off his wittioisms in a most taking manner. There are but few who can beat J. C. C. on a general sale.

Mr. Dan Carty, while on his way to the post office on Tuesday afternoon, noticed a number of bank bills drop from a lady's pocket book. The owner was unaware of her loss until Mr. Carty had nicked up the potes and gallarly lad nicked up the potes and gallarly was unaware of her loss until Mr. Carty had picked up the notes and gallantly returned them to her. Her joy may be imagined. Dan received her thanks with a beaming smile, and went on happy in the consciousness that he had done and honest act. The money fell into good hands. defend the Queen, the legislative union, and the successors to the throne, so long as they remained true to Protestantism. There were a few points the speaker wished to refer to on this occasion, and and in doing so he would not forget that he was speaking as a Christian preacher and in the House of the Lord. (1) What and in the House of the Lord. (1) what had Protestantism done? (2) What was it doing? (3) What was it destined to do in the time to come. Protestanism had done away with the traditional religion which had for centuries been fostered by Rome, and had replactional religion. ed it by a preaching ministry and an open Bible. The progressive form of Christianity was the Word of God, and the aggressive form was the preaching of ot the Word. Before printing was in-troduced oral instruction had to be given the pesple. Whatever agencies had been put forth in days past to destroy the Word of God had failed, and it would the Word of God had failed, and it would continue to be handed down to the latest ages as God's communication with man. The Bible occupied a twofold-position: (1.) It was a text-book for the preacher; (2.) It secured the laity against false teaching on the part of the preach er. Heresy, if now preached from the pulpit, could be detected by the pow. The first thing the Reformation did was to repudiate the traditions of the Roman Church; such as the doctrine of transparentiation, praying to the Saints. substantiation, praying to the Saints, withholding the cup from the laity, the inauguration of the seven sacraments, the imposition of the confessional, &c. The Saline Baths.—Mr. John Broh.

Mr. Charles Slight, of Winnipeg, and wister the crew the extinguish it but finding it gaining too much headway headed the vessel for shore, where they succeeded the vessel for shore, was not their duty to prosecute for finfallible then the Word of God was the true test. The Roman Church did not silvent the knowledge of the true test. The Roman Church did not the true test. The Roman Church did not wish to disseminate the knowledge of the Bible. It was not a text book even wish to dissem man has closed the same bearing states for the same season. He has been well patronized and hopes for a continuance of the same when he re-opens the baths next year.

With his Bible in his hand every Christian sees that he has the pri-vilege of going direct to God. From every pulpit came forth testimony to the worth of the Bible, and the Bible said, worth of the Bible, and the Bible said, "Let God be true, and every man a liar." Protestantism had restored good works to their proper place, but had not given them the first place. Had any man ever been thrust out of the Romish Church, no matter how profligate, who was willing to be obedient to the Church? Disobedience to the Church was, according to Romanism, a greater offence than dis-obedience to God. For the former offence the delinquent was liable to be ex-communicated, but not so for the latter. Protestantism teaches that no man is a

The rev. speaker contended he did not attack the Roman Catholics as individuals—he attacked the Pomisk water. tacked the Romish system. Papal countries were behind Protestant countries in progress: the Papal system was a despotism, and gave a right to the hierarchy over the faith and lives of the people; and the worst governments to-day were those that adhered to the Papacy. The rev. speaker contrasted the progress of the United States as against that of the South American Spanish republics, to illustrate his contention in this regard. Continuing, he said that Rome had persecuted with fire and sword in days gone by, and although we in Ontario could see no evidence of the persecuting spirit on the part of the Romish church, yet the spirit of persecution was still there. The work of the Protestant Church had been great in the past and much progress had been made. The work of Protestantism was great at the present time, and work of the Lord was moving onward. Even in Italy, under the shadow or the Vatican, the missionaries of Protestantism were opening up the Word of God to those who had never had a similar DETROIT, Oct. 31.—Captain Putnam, of the tug Sill, who was racing with the tug Weitzel on Saturday morning when she exploded, makes the following state--We were running down the lake off Oak Creek, and were under good headway. The Sill was about two feet from the Weitzel, and the fireman had gone down to the furnace and was putt-ing in coal, for we could see the black smoke coming out of the stack. The engineer then went to the engine-room and as he entered we could see his hand already shaped as if to take hold of the water valve, when in an instant there was a loud explosion, and we were fairly lifted from the water, and covered with dirt and cinders from the Weitzet. A large piece of timber struck the Sill's fireman and injured him considerably. We were all black as coal from head to we were all black as coal from head to owing to the scarcity of copies of the Bible, and the lack of education among the pesple.
