I Told You So.

By RUTH CAMERON.

RUTH CAMERON.

There is a tradition, there is no doubt about it, that "I told you so" is a very objectionable thing to say or to infer. There is also a tradition that women are more apt to be guilty thereof than men.

I have acquired an idea recently when and why those traditions arose. A group of us were talking the other day on the all-absorbing subject of domestic help. Four women had told of their difficulties and the difficulties of neighbors and friends in getting the same, and the large wages they had had to pay.

She Didn't Dare To Tell Him Herself.

"Well," sighed one woman who had been listening to this testimony, "I'd like my husband to hear all that why we were speaking about maids the other day and he said this talk about their being so hard to get, and about their getting such high wages, was all nonsense. I'd give anything if he could have been here."

"Why don't you tell him?" asked someone.

"Oh, I couldn't do that. He'd say I was trying to say 'I told you so,'" said the other woman.

In other words, if a man pooh-poohs a woman's opinions, and then a woman gets proof that her opinions are right, she mustn't bring that proof to him because that is saying, "I told you so."

He Objected To Her Proving Her Point.

All of which reminds me of a little experience I had last summer. A man and a woman had an argument about a story which both had seen in a newspaper a few days before. She declared that it said one thing, he another. Finally she procured a copy, substantiating her claim and showed it to him. After she had gone out of the room he turned to some other people, "I told you so," he said sarcastically.

Some weeks later, by some odd accident, he came across another edition of the paper. And it seemed that the story in that edition had been written quite differently and substantiated his claim. The woman was away on a visit. "I'm going to send it to her," he said triumphantly.

Sauce for the Gander but not for the Goose.

Plainly, if a woman insists on bringing forward proof that her husband (or any man) was not justified in pooh-poohing her arguments or her point of view, that is saying "I told you so" and is a most disagreeable thing to do.

But if a man brings up an argument or adduces a fact to prove he was right, that is mere masculine justice.

Plainly it all depends on the point of view.

MINARD'S LINIMENT is the only Liniment asked for at my store and the only one we keep for sale.

The greatest need is that mothers should have the whole confidence of their children. At school the child, in due time, should learn the fundamental facts of life from elementary biology and at home the mother should on suitable occasions, frankly explain to her child its relationship to its parents, and she should surround that explanation with the strongest sentiment of love and respect.

Surely parents cannot believe that their children learn nothing of these things on the street, and among their schoolmates. It cannot be said too frequently that the only way to ensure a clean and healthy mind in a child is, through the complete frankness of the mother.

A GOLFER'S WISD.

I have no wish to dress in silk. I do not care to wear a crown. I do not yearn to bathe in milk. Or champagne wash my dinner down.

I have no great desire to be a man of much importance, here. And have the public welcome me. With hands of brass when I appear. And should a fairy kind and good. Grant me one favor, without price, I'd make this golfer's prayer, I would: "Oh, kindly rid me of my slice!"

I am not one intent on fame. I do not care to lead the throng. Though strangers never hear my name. Contentedly I'll plod along. Enough to eat, enough to wear. And strength to do my daily task. With now and then a chance to fare. On pleasure's ways, is all I ask. But should a fairy come to me And say: "What joy will you pursue?" I'll grant one wish. What shall it be? I'd answer "Rid me of my slice!"

You that have never swung a club And drawn its face across the ball And muttered to yourself: "You dub! As, in a curve you watched it fall, May never guess the rage that lies Within that shortened arc of flight. Nor how men curse the ball that flies With loss of distance to the right; But every golfing fiend will know Why gold and fame I'd sacrifice. If but some fairy, good, would show Me how to drive without a slice!"

Household Notes.

Out flour can be used with white flour for yeast bread.

The tops of young beets make very palatable greens.

Potatoes or dressed cucumbers are best to serve with fish.

If an ink spot has not dried, it can be removed with water.

Milady's Boudoir.

CANDLELIGHT TOILET HINTS.

The bedtime toilet of Milady's pink fingers is an important duty that no one, and especially Milady who works, should ever neglect. For it is with those ten rosy fingers that she matches her skill against the bread-winning world.

There is little time, however, in the hurry scurry of the morning hours which can be devoted to this fastidious task. The bedtime toilet, therefore, should be a thorough one and should be made in a kimono or a loose dressing gown, seated before a dressing table in a low rocker.

When the nails receive a little attention each day, from five to ten minutes are sufficient, a visit to the professional manicurist, is only necessary once a month. After the nails have attained a certain degree of comeliness, less time is required to keep them in this condition. They are always cleaned with an orange stick. The nail brush is also brought into play and some women prefer it.

Where the nails are stained a wisp of absorbent cotton is twisted around the flat side of the stick, dipped in a bleaching solution, pressed under the nail and over it.

The cuticle is always pressed back to show the delicate half-moon. Where it is inclined to be sensitive, a little dab of cold cream will soften the skin and keep it from being irritated by the pressure, which should always be gentle. Where the tiny frame of skin is broken, hang-nails are encouraged and this is most unsightly.

As a rule it is not necessary to use the buffer more than three times a week. Too high a luster on the nails is not in good taste. Where it is necessary to employ a little nail paste to impart a delicate color, be sure not to make them too red, for this is at once in accordance with theatrical make up and therefore tabooed.

Everyday Etiquette.

"How long should you remain when making a call?" When someone else calls and the hostess rises to greet her, should you also rise?" questioned Mary.

"When making a formal call you should stay fifteen minutes or twenty, not longer than a half hour. An informal call may be prolonged at the invitation of the hostess. If you are calling on a woman much older than when she does, but under other circumstances you should remain seated. When another caller rises to leave, it is sufficient for you to bow and smile without rising," helped her teacher.

Special Notice.

At the end of this year we will give 5 cts. for every 12 Outside Green Wrappers obtained from STAFFORD'S LINIMENT.

We will also give $10.00 to the person forwarding us the largest number and $5.00 to the second largest.

We will keep a record of every person forwarding us these wrappers from time to time and at the end of the year we will publish the names of the winners.

STAFFORD'S LINIMENT is the Strongest and most penetrating Liniment for sale in Newfoundland and is sold in over 500 stores.

It is the best Liniment you can use for RHEUMATISM, LUMBAGO, NEURALGIA and all ACHES and PAINS. Owing to the cost of Bottles and Ingredients used in the manufacturing of this Liniment, we have had to advance the price a little. But the bottle still remains the same size.

DIGGING UP.

WINT MASON.

Oh, chee, it is a splendid thing to see our hard-earned scads take wing! We're called on, every week or four, to dig up coin, and then some more, to buy some bonds, or help Red Cross, and joyfully we dig the doos.

With other causes growing lax, we're asked to pony up a tax, or help the Belgians or the Serbs, or buy the starving Russ some herbs. We used to snarl like Thomas Cat, when some one came and passed the hat; we'd frown and make a nasty speech about the daughter of the leech. But now we spring no snarls or groans when we are asked to shed the bones. We dig up all the plunks on hand, and say, "The cause is truly grand, and we most bitterly regret we can't do more, already yet."

Our dollars are no longer gods; we find it great to slip our wards. Of course some tightwads still survive, but they're ashamed that they're alive. No longer do they strut in pride because they've fortunes multiplied; they see in every glance disdain, and every hour brings them a pain. Their ranks grow smaller every day; they learn to shoo the wealth away. Great James! It is a noble thing, to see the treasured scads taking wing, to have them vanish from our view, and think of all the good they'll do!

Silk of blege with blue stripes, is one of the favorite materials. If the costume is very sombre wear a waistcoat of brilliant hue.

The Freedom of the Sea

AS GERMANY WOULD HAVE

In the course of an article on the U-boat in the Deutsche Revue, March, Vice-Admiral Hermann Kiroff writes that Germany understands by "Freedom of the Seas" nothing less than a complete breaking of the hitherto unlimited British dominion of the sea, a break-up of the British world domination—in short, the overthrow of Germany's mortal enemy, the world. To this end England must get out of Calais-Boulogne (and prevented from making the Channel Tunnel), out of Lemnos, Egypt, etc. Germany must retain the Flanders coast, the Suez Canal must be internationalized, the German fleet abroad must be strengthened, and war boats, etc., must be built in the German colonies. Only when these conditions have been fulfilled will Germany, by her fleet and her air power,
