Vagrant With a Bad Record Gets Six Months in the Central-Police Court News.

Thomas D. Smith and Alexander Anderson, were charged at the police court this morning with refusing to more on when ordered to do so by an officer at the corner of Central avenue and William streets, on the night of Aug. 19, when a car was derailed. Both of the defendants pleaded not guilty.

P. C. Howie, sworn, saw Anderson and Smith standing together, about 8 o'clock, and ordered them to go, but they only moved a little way and again stood in the center of the street. Cross-examined by Mr. Essery, witness said that the defendants gave their names and addresses willingly, when he asked for them. They were not disorderly, but simply watching

David McKenna, an elderly citizen, was charged with a similar offense. P. C. Howie said he had ordered McKenna to move. The latter did so, but returned shortly after. P. C. Johnston also told McKenna to go home, but saw him in the crowd afterwards. Mr. McKenna explained that he was looking for his boy, who was in the crowd. That was the reason he returned after leaving the first time.

Charles Cox, who was arrested some months ago charged with stealing sums of money from his employer, J. Coursey, appeared this morning. He was allowed time to pay the money back. Cox should be bailed to appear again in line with the leading farce-comedy in a month, as he had part of the organizations of the day. Catchy music Mr. Coursey said he was willing sum taken. Cox was bailed to appear in one month.

James Ward was charged with breach of the liquor bylaw. Mr. Ward has a wholesale shop-keeper's license, and it is alleged that he sells it by the glass to customers. Ward pleaded not guilty. Five witnesses were called, James Ross, Arthur Brock, Alexander. Mc-Arthur and Charles and Thomas Lightheart, who all swore that they had not had any liquor in Ward's store on Aug. 19, the day of the alleged offense. the case was enlarged for a week. Sidney Jones was charged with be ing drunk and disorderly, and with having relieved Wm. Roberts, a farm hand, of $10 in cash. Roberts was giving Jones a drive in his rig, and they had a few drinks together, when, Roberts alleges, Jones put his hand in his (Roberts') pocket and took the money. This occurred on Wednesday night. A sum of $5 was found on Jones at the time of his arrest. The case was enlarged for a week. Alex. McKenzie and John Elkington, drunks, were let go. Timothy Sullivan, a drunk, with a record of having been up 42 times, was given six months in the Central.

Fred B. Edmunds, an insane youth, was taken in charge by his father. A youth, charged with vagrancy, was sentenced to six months in the Cent-

Amusements.

Edwin C. Jepson's producti i of 'Darkest Russia," H. Grafton Donnelly's sensational drama, was presented at the Grand Opera House last night by a thoroughly capable company. The attendance was good. It is a popular play, in which the color is laid on unsparingly with a wide brush. It is as full of plot and incident as an egg is full of meat. The villains are a weak, bad man and a strong, bad woman, and their son, whose intentions are bad. Their chief business in life is to keep three pairs of devoted lovers apart and to make them unhappy. They succeed until the very last minute, when the good are satisfactorily rewarded and the bad punished, amid the enthusiastic plaudits of the gallery. There is a good, broad vein of humor throughout the play, too, and on the whole it has the elements of popularity.

The scenes are divided between the brilliant surroundings of the imperial court circles at St. Petersburg and a gloomy exile station on the Siberian road. The play is well staged and the scenery and costumes excellent. H. R. Atherton, as Count Nozimoff, a sort of providence, who set at naught the machinations of the wicked, was the gallery favorite, next to Miss Katherine Willard, as Ida Barosky, an exile's daughter, who is the heroine of the play. Miss Kate Jepson played the wicked Countess Karsicheff so well that she was cordially hated and loudly hissed by the gallery. John DeGez, as minister of police, shared this flattering unpopularity. Harry D. Byers, as Col. Cobb, an American traveler, supplied the humorous element, ably assisted by Miss Alfa Perry, as the Baronet Von Rhineburg. Mr. Byers is original and refreshing. He succeeds in being funny even when saying nothing, and apparently doing nothing. The remainder of the rather large cast is in capable hands. The performance will be repeated tonight and Saturday night.

comedy presented by Charles E. Pusey and Tom Ricketts and a specially selected company of 25 talented players and vaudeville stars, will be seen at the Grand for four nights, commencing on Monday. Since last season the play has been thoroughly revised and brought up to date. Another feature of this season's production is the liberal introduction of "vaudeville trimmings" and pretty girls. These two pleasing addihas been interpolated at every possible opportunity, and the result is an evening's entertainment of the merriest description. This year's company is a large one, and numbers 25 people, prominent among them being Chas. A. Pusey, Tom Ricketts, James Cherry, John P. Kennedy, Earl C. Way, Arthur E. Reach, Charles E. SORRENTINO'S MARCHES.

Signor Eugenio Sorrentino, the great leader of the Banda Rossa, has composed two marches this summer which have broken all records for popular success ever made in America. first of these marches, "Willow Grove," was named in honor of the beautiful park near Philadelphia, where the Banda Rossa played during the first seven weeks of the past summer. The first edition of "Willow Grove" was exhausted in one week after its publication, and the fourth edition of the wonderful march is now on the market. This march possesses a fascination in melody and rhythm from which it is impossible to escape, and one never tires of it, even after hearing a hundred times. The second march, "Harriet" was composed by Sorrentino in Minneapo-lis, while the Banda Rossa was playing at Lake Harriet, in that city, and its popularity equals that of Grove." The young Italian leader has the gift of natural melody to an extraordinary degree, and in these two marches, without once descending to the vulgar or the commonplace, he has succeeded in striking the happiest vein of high class popularity possible to imagine. In Philadelphia and Minneapolis, the 'Willow Grove" and "Harriet" marches are now heard in every home, and are whistled on every street corner where can be found a boy of even moderate musical ability and quickness of ear.

Formidable Kit Unearthed in the Queen City Oil Company's Yard-Dunn a Dangerous Man.

last Friday evening at the tunnel in company with Jos. Dunn, who was taken to Toledo, told the police officers caped with a few scratches. here, while he was in custody, of a parcel of tools that Dunn had in his possession. When he knew that he must return to Toledo, Dunn confided to Bruce where he had hidden his outfit, and Detective Yorrel made an arrangement with Bruce to recover them. The latter turned up today, having unearthed the outfit in the yard of the Queen City Oil Works in London, the office of which Dunn had intended to burglarize, had he not been interfered with. Detective Yorrell has now in his possession the plant that Williams used, consisting of a number of steel twist bits, files, a bottle of nitro-glycerine and a large can of dynamite, fuse and caps and a 32-caliber revolver, loaded. Dunn also admitted that it was he who entered a freight car at the M. C. R. freight station in St. Thomas some three weeks ago and stole some clothing, part of which he was wearing at the time of his arrest. He certainly was a character of which the country is well rid, and it is to be hoped that the Toledo authorities will retire him from active service for some
